Save Marooned Man From River

LOWELL, Feb. 3—Coast Guardsmen, firemen and police won a grim, all-night battle in sub-freezing temperature today to rescue a man marooned on a jagged rock in the Merrimack river.

Bleeding, praying and half-frozen, the principal figure of the Merrimack river's most stirring drama in history was identified as Edward P. "Ted" Giblin, 32, musician and music teacher, of Stevens street, Lowell, after he had been taken to St. Joseph's Hospital.

With the temperature 15 above zero, Giblin was hauled ashore in a breeches buoy above the raging torrents of the Merrimack—as the mist cleared and dawn broke.

Thousands of onlookers, who had crowded the shore since midnight shouting words of encouragement to the suffering man, cheered the victory of rescuers.

RECOGNIZED BROTHER

Adding to the drama were Giblin's parents, his two brothers and a sister, who watched and cheered the rescuers—unaware that the castaway 150 feet from shore was "their own."

At 4 A. M., however, one brother, Raymond, 29, recognized the marooned man through field glasses as his brother.

He did not tell his parents, brother and sister because he said that he "hoped I was mistaken." For three hours he watched his brother's terrorizing ordeal.

At one time during the night, as Giblin clung to his narrow refuge, volunteers on the shore began to make arrangements for a sound truck on nearby Pawtucket bridge, from which they hoped a Catholic

Victim Slugs Bandit in Lineup

An infuriated victim in a recent attempted holdup today injected fireworks into the first police lineup of the new anti-crime drive when he identified the bandit by hitting him on the jaw.

The two-fisted identifier was John Pilibosian, 57, powerfully built Roxbury grocer.

Pilibosian was among a large group of detectives scrutinizing 32 suspects picked up during the first night patrol following Police Commissioner Timilty's cleanup order, which added 850 men to extra duty.

CHASED WITH KNIFE

Suddenly he saw the Negro who, he said, attempted to hold him up in the establishment he has conducted for the past 16 years at Ruggles and Cabot streets.

Lunging forward, the grocer belabored the man lustily until detectives pried him loose to save the suspect from further punishment.

Pilibosian told police he had

Kills Brother in Row Over Candy

MACHIAS, Me., Feb. 3—An argument over a box of candy today precipitated a Cain-Abel tragedy in which brother slew brother before the horrified eyes of their widowed mother, according to police.

The victim was Milton Johnson, 22-year-old grocery clerk, who died in Hanson Hospital from a bullet wound in the abdomen.

The weapon was fired, according to Sheriff Harry E. Spear, by Milton's brother, Winslow, 16-year-old high school pupil.

Winslow was held in Washington County jail pending arraignment on a charge, the nature of which police had not determined.

Witnessing the shooting was their mother, Mrs. Edith Johnson, who has borne 10 other children.

Police said the brothers argued over a box of candy which Milton was to have sold on his grocery route. Later, according to the officers, Winslow, carrying the rifle, went into the kitchen, warning Milton:

"Don't follow me!"

The elder brother disregarded the warning. A moment later he lay mortally wounded on the floor.

11 Killed as 2 Navy Planes Collide

SAN PEDRO, Feb. 3—A mid-air collision of two giant bombers—worst plane disaster in American naval history—claimed its 11th life today as search was made by air and sea for the missing bodies of ten airmen.

Rescued from the water after the bomber 11-P-4 fell in a splintering impact last night, Jesse Hanley Hester, radioman first class, of San Diego, died aboard the hospital ship Relief at San Clemente Island this morning.

Three of his companions were seriously injured, but were expected to recover.

The bodies of three more of the 11-P-4's crew and the seven men in its sister bomber, the 11-P-3, were hunted by the United States fleet. Navy sources here said unofficially there was no hope the men had survived.

COLLIDE IN SQUALL

The bombers, scouting for a theoretical enemy off the Southern California coast, collided during a sudden rain squall, within view of maneuvering surface ships.

The 11-P-3 fell in flames. The 11-P-4 smashed to pieces on the choppy sea.

Naval officers ashore said the bombers, flying near each other, might have been crushed together by a sudden downdraft. They were cruising at about 140 miles an hour, close above four battleships and 20 destroyers.

Searchlights suddenly illuminated the scene and warship launches put out to rescue the men, while the entire war games of the fleet came to a halt.

10 MISSING MEN

The ten missing airmen, all almost certainly lost, were announced by Admiral Claude C. Bloch as:

LIEUT. ELMER J. COOPER, aviation cadet, commanding the 11-P-3, Monticello, Ark.

IRWIN J. KOCH, aviation cadet, Toledo, Ohio.

JOSEPH E. WALTON, machinist's mate.

M. J. FITZMAURICE, machinist's mate.

New System Costs Her $81 in Fines

Instituting a new system of fines, Judge Joseph T. Zottoli in Municipal court today assessed a Belmont woman a total of $81 for parking violations.

Police testified they had issued 16 parking summonses to Anna M. Nestor of Cushing avenue, Belmont. Pleading innocent to the charges, the woman said she did not remember receiving the tags.

The judge filed the first 10 tags. Then he fined her $11 for the 11th—$12 for the 12th—$13 for the 13th—and so on up to 16.

Newark Low Ceiling Shunts Plane North

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 3 (AP)—An American Airways transcontinental plane which left Los Angeles at 4:30 p. m. yesterday, landed at the State Airport, Hillsgrove, this afternoon, forced north because of heavy fog at Washington and Newark.

Pilot Jasper Lee said a 300-foot ceiling at Newark prohibited his landing there, and he followed the Boston beam to a point near Framingham, and then got under the haze and headed for Hillsgrove.

Among passengers aboard were Count Louis De Brandes, who sails for France tomorrow; Mrs. Edith Becklir of Brooklyn, Frank A. Kahrs, arms company official, of Bridgeport, and Jefferson Davis, Los Angeles attorney.

F. H. Prince Sees Slump Soon Ended

Boston Financier Says Farmers in Good Condition Now

NEW YORK, Feb. 3 (AP)—Frederick H. Prince, Boston financier and chairman of the board of Armour & Co., Chicago, predicted today the business recession will be "cleared up in two or three months."

Prince, who was sailing on the Berengaria to spend six weeks in Paris and the south of France, said he thought fear of labor troubles had caused businessmen to overload their inventories, and a cessation of buying had resulted.

"However, I think that sixty or ninety days should right that condition," he said. "One very good sign is that the farmers, who are the real foundation of American prosperity, are in good condition. They are cheerful and have been making money.

"It is true that prices have been too high, but when that condition is remedied the people will buy."

Girl's 8 Teeth Pulled in Error

But Parents Forgive School Dentist

ASHAWAY, R. I., Feb. 3 (AP)—Seven-year-old Betty Champlin was eating soft foods today and thereby hangs a peculiar tale.

Betty had eight teeth extracted, by error, and the incident excited her father, mother, several school executives and a school dentist no little.

It all started when Betty came home and pointed to her almost toothless mouth, explaining the dentist pulled eight.

"Of all things," her father exploded, "I told them they couldn't take out those teeth. I—"

Champlin 'phoned the school executives and the dentist. All agreed it was a "horrible mistake."

Investigation disclosed there was another Champlin girl in Betty's class. Her father's name is George. Betty's father's name also is George. When the dentist sent for George Champlin's daughter it was Betty who went.

The explanations, along with apologies, mollified Papa Champlin.

"We all make mistakes," he said. "The teeth are gone. They were only the first teeth anyway. They'll be more coming."

Draft 10 Appeal For Aid

WASHINGTON, Feb 3 (INS)—Shutting off all debate, leaders of the conference of small business men today jammed through to approval more than 10 resolutions calling for assistance to small industry and condemning many New Deal recovery measures.

This was accomplished amid scenes of uproar and confusion during which police invaded the floor and carried out two of the delegates. One was A. S. Shafer, Philadelphia, who was ejected yesterday.

There was also some fist-swinging, although apparently without major casualties.

Cries of "railroading" and demands to be heard came from all parts of the auditorium.

SLAP AT HOOVER

The uprising was precipitated by angry delegates led by Shafer and Robert Kaempfer of New York who shouted that the convention resolutions had been "railroaded" through to approval by "hand picked" leaders.

Convention Chairman Fred Roth vainly pounded for order as delegates moved towards the pair.

During the confusion, Shafer hung two placards on himself, one on his hat and one on his chest. The first read "What Good Is a Liberal Constructive Program With a Jittery Chairman on the Job?" the other said: "What We Need is a Roosevelt Chairman and Not a Hoover Henchman."

Members of the Philadelphia delegation threatened to maltreat Shafer and a large squad of police

Boy Blindfolded, Bound, Says Dad

TEAR HIS PANTS

Shafer, who on two occasions yesterday precipitated a near-riot on the convention floor with his demand for the right to speak, was seized and carried out of the hall, but not until his trousers had nearly been torn off. Yesterday, during one outburst, Shafer was locked in a cloakroom by police.

Fists swinging, Kaempfer was rushed out of the building and told by irate police not to come back. His had been shouting as he was "forgotten men of New York."

Until the riot, the convention had proceeded in an orderly fashion, in sharp contrast to yesterday's tumultuous debate. Roth and the nine convention committee chairmen refused to permit debate of any of the more than 100 resolutions sponsored by the groups. Under the fabric "gag" placed upon the delegates, the resolutions simply were read by the chairmen and approved in mob fashion by a standing vote.

ASK INSURED LOANS

Chief among the suggestions adopted by the convention were:

1—Government-insured loans to small industry, to be made either by private banks or by a newly created federal agency;

2—Immediate repeal of the undistributed profits tax;

3—Opposition to all forms of federal wage-hour regulation and abandonment of all attempts by the government to regulate and control private industry;

4—Demand that unions be prohibited from "harassing and intimidating" business;

5—Immediate balancing of the budget;

6—Repeal of the Wagner labor relations act;

7—Tightening of installment selling methods, and,

8—Demands that President Roosevelt deliver a "fireside chat," in which he should promise business will be given a new "breathing spell."

MEASURES TO ROOSEVELT

Immediately after adjournment, Roth and the committee chairmen went into conference to draft the resolutions into shape for presentation to President Roosevelt. They will serve as the conference representatives to carry the proposals to the White House tomorrow.

The meeting between the conference committee and the President, scheduled for this afternoon, was put off until tomorrow to allow more time for "crystallizing" the recommendations when word was received from the White House.

Boston Attorney Leads 'Little Business' Revolt

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3—A. B. Comstock, Boston lawyer, today led a small revolution of disgruntled delegates to the President's conference of small business men.

The dissatisfied group of about 75 delegates, among whom was R. C. Cooke of Natick, president of Boston Beverage, Inc., retired to a separate room from the main conference and continued a hectic discussion of business conditions with Comstock acting as chairman.

Comstock's revolt followed a sharp disagreement last night between him and Alfred C. Gaunt of Methuen, president of the Merrimac Mills. Gaunt is the spokesman for about 18 New England delegates.

At a meeting of the New England delegation at the Willard Hotel Gaunt accused Comstock of being "a lawyer representing big business" instead of little business. Gaunt charged that Comstock was like a lot of corner grocers," Miss Dowd said.

RESOLVES FOR PRESIDENT

James G. Daly of Columbus, O., chairman of the "loans to small companies" group, said today that he would see to it personally that Miss Dowd's resolution would be taken to the White House and given to President Roosevelt along with the other resolutions. Miss Dowd's resolution said in part:

"Resolved, That we deplore the published reports that we are challenging big business, with whom we have a common object. His faction remained at the main conference.

CUMSTOCK WITHDRAWS

Comstock withdrew from the main conference after it had voted down his proposal to divide into 12 regional groups, comprising Federal Reserve districts. Gaunt and his faction remained at the main conference.

In the meantime, Miss Mary Dowd, chairman of the Dowd Box Company, at Worcester, who is a member of the special group on loans to small companies, sponsored a resolution deploring local press reports ridiculing yesterday's riotous meeting. The resolution was adopted by the "loans" group.

'Hard Hitter' Found Guilty

Jury Finds Woman Slew Her Mate

SAN RAFAEL, Cal., Feb. 3 (INS)—One of California's strangest murder trials ended today in a verdict of second degree murder against Mrs. Maria Marshall, buxom 47-year-old farm woman, for the slaying of her husband, Benjamin Marshall, 43.

The jury verdict, carrying a penalty of five years to life, was in accordance with District Attorney A. E. Hagshaw's demands in closing arguments.

"This powerful woman," he told jurors, "hit her frail husband once on the head and once too often."

Mrs. Marshall, who had maintained her innocence throughout the long preliminary investigation and subsequent trial, wept at the verdict.

Bias Is Refuted By Madden, NLRB Head

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3 (AP)—Warren Madden, chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, asserted today his agency was neither biased nor incompetent, and had no "illusions about remaking the social order."

BENEFITS CITED

Madden's statement was made to the Senate Judiciary Committee which is considering a request from Senator Borke (D) of Nebraska to investigate "widespread reports" the board was biased and incompetent in administering the Wagner Labor Act.

Madden said Burke based his criticisms on "a supply of misinformation, half-truths and triviality."

The labor board head maintained that employes and employers alike have benefited from the board's administration of the Wagner Act.

"We have had no starry-eyed illusions about remaking the social order," he told the committee.

"Our ambition has been to do an orderly job.

"We have seen millions of American workmen avail themselves of a freedom they never had before.

SPYING HARD HIT

"We have seen thousands of employers put their relations with their employes upon a basis of mutually self-respecting bargaining, who never had done so before.

"We have seen telling blows dealt at the despicable practice of corrupting American workmen by hiring them to spy upon and betray their fellow workmen for exercising their natural and legal rights."

ELSIE ROBINSON, writes from the woman's viewpoint, discusses everyday affairs and problems, regularly in the Boston American.

McGrady Warns Of Collectivists

A warning against economist and "planning" groups advocating "collectivist schemes" and "controlled economies" was sounded by Edward F. McGrady, former assistant Secretary of Labor, in an address at a Boston Chamber of Commerce luncheon today.

McGrady, known as the New Deal's best "trouble shooter," declared that a solution to our economic and social problems can be found only by co-operation between labor and industry.

"We have within our borders those lamentably proclaiming that the profit motive and the capitalistic system must be abolished," he said.

"There are ten attacking our way of doing business for every one defending it. All kinds of collectivist schemes, of controlled economies, are in the air.

"No assistance can be looked for from this group.

"What we need is more teamwork, better understanding, patience and tolerance with each other. The country needs more smiles and less snarls.

"Left to itself, labor cannot correct the uncertainty and create adequate stability. Neither has industry been able to find a satisfactory solution, in spite of the fact that we have the smartest business men in the world. Both groups need and must have the sympathetic assistance of the government."

More Farm Cash May Be Asked

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3 (AP)—Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said today the administration might ask a deficiency appropriation to care for needy farmers, if it becomes necessary.

Talking to reporters with Budget Director Bell at his side, Morgenthau said:

"No one is more interested or sympathetic with the needy than Mr. Bell and myself. If more money is needed, no one will be more willing to ask Congress for it than Mr. Bell and myself."

To aid those in distress in cities, Morgenthau said that the Works Progress Administration would not need to ask Congress for more money to finance it from now until June 30, the end of the fiscal year.

Asked if the treasury was considering financing relief by destertilizing gold or borrowing money on the assets of government corporations, the secretary replied:

"If we need more money, we will ask Congress for it in a straight-forward manner. No sleight-of-hand or phoney methods will be used."

2 Brothers Guilty In Auto Conspiracy

A Middlesex County Superior Court jury after 11 hours' deliberation today found two Waltham brothers guilty of larceny and conspiracy to defraud an automobile finance company. They are Frank and Leo Grannone, who owned an automobile business in Waltham.

Frank was given two sentences of a year each in the House of Correction by Judge Wilford D. Gray, the terms to run concurrently. Leo was placed on probation for two years. They were alleged to have obtained $1687 fraudulently.

Woman Burglary Charge Is Dropped

A burglary charge against Mrs. Pearl G. Arabian, 28, of 394 Mt. Auburn street, Watertown, was dismissed today in Waltham court by request of police.

After observing a suspicious looking car pull away from the curb near a store late on the night of January 24, police fired two shots, when their shots went unanswered. Mrs. Arabian testified that she did not hear them.

Lodge Battles President on Neutrality

Assails 'War Power' As Defense Hearing Continues

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3—Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., today launched a one-man campaign to strip the President of all neutrality power as hearings on the national defense program continued in the lower house.

Lodge urged passage of a law to restore to Congress the power to invoke neutrality legislation. His views were made before a secret session of the Senate foreign relations committee.

"The neutrality act as it now stands puts a lot of power in the hands of the President," Lodge told the committee. "It is virtually the power to make war. That is a power no President should want to possess. My bill simply restores the war-making power to Congress."

R. J. SOLON IN MOVE

As defense program hearings continued before the House naval affairs committee, Rep. O'Connell (D.) of Rhode Island, said he would offer an amendment to the $800,000,000 naval expansion bill to set aside at least $6,000,000 to build at least two airplane carriers.

O'Connell said he would stipulate that the ships be built in this country by American engineers and that he would advocate that they be of different design than the ill-fated Akron and Macon, whose destruction ended experiments with lighter-than-air cruisers in this country.

At the same time Chairman May (D.) of Kentucky, of the House military committee said that he would ask the rules committee to give precedence to the bill designed to take the profits out of war, another legislative phase of President Roosevelt's national defense program.

ROW IN LEGION RANKS

A row broke out within the ranks of the American Legion over the action of National Commander Daniel J. Doherty of Massachusetts urging veteran support for the President's national defense program.

Representative Hamilton Fish, Jr. (R-N. Y.), prominent Legionnaire, attacked Doherty's endorsement, announced his own opposition to the $800,000,000 naval program and appealed to Legionnaires to refrain from supporting it.

Fish charged the naval program was designed "not for national defense but for aggression and to police and quarantine the world."

Fr. Ambrose Dore Dies in Florida

The Rev. Ambrose A. Dore, pastor of St. Raphael's Church, West Medford, died today in St. Petersburg, Fla.

Father Dore is the son of John B. Dore of Boston, who for many years was commissioner of sewers.

Born in Boston, he was educated at Boston College and at the American College in Rome. During the World War he served as a chaplain overseas.

Father Dore was assigned to the Medford parish last July. Formerly he was a curate in churches at Somerville, North Cambridge and Boston, and was pastor of Sacred Heart Church, Groton, and St. Paul's Church, Wellesley.

The body will be brought to Medford for burial.

Claims Deal Leading U.S. To Anarchy

Harvard Sociologist Lashes Out at 'Brain-Trusters'

New Deal brain-trusters have led America to the brink of an "anarchy of futility," according to Dr. Carle Zimmerman, Harvard professor of sociology.

Zimmerman, himself an exponent of the academic method in the social sciences, launched this bitter attack in a speech to the Harvard Club of Quincy.

Affected worst by the New Deal's "inconsistency," he asserted, is New England.

"No area will suffer more than New England," he said. "The probable result of hours and wages regulations will be few if any factories in New England.

'ALL 'ROUND LOSS'

"Further, it will cost New England increased taxes to help the big 'Leviathan' pay for the increased unemployment in the South. In this anarchy, it is purely a question of loss all around. No one will gain."

He continued:

"The advice of the contemporary brain-trust, when followed, has had consequences, on the whole, so unfortunate that it is no light matter.

"Unfortunate blunders have been accentuated in foreign export policy, tax measures, and federal government political plank."

LAY [illegible] TAXES

Deal taxes, he added, have "overturned the historic differentials of America's tax policy," asserting:

"Any reasonable man can see that the main causes of the depression are the high prices of food and the necessities of life (processing taxes and sales taxes) and payroll taxes."

Roosevelt Sees Early Windup Of Congress

President Visions Quick Passage of Deal Measures

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3 (INS)—President Roosevelt has informed Congressional callers that the path is clear for early adjournment of Congress—which would give the nation a "breathing spell"—if Congress digs in and completes its work.

With the Administration's legislative program virtually complete and no last-minute major measures planned for submission to Congress the Chief Executive believes Congress should adjourn long before torrid weather sets in.

On the basis of reports from House leaders, Roosevelt has gone so far as to tell callers that the House will complete its legislative calendar by March 15. Adjournment then, he holds, will be up to the Senate.

WANTS WAGE BILL

While Roosevelt has emphasized to callers that none of the major measures laid before Congress has been abandoned, he foresees no real obstacle to early action except the Senate filibuster on anti-lynching legislation.

The legislative program now includes the $800,000,000 naval expansion program, fair revision, wage-hour bill, government reorganization, and regional planning, with creation of a joint congressional committee to investigate anti-trust laws and monopolies slated to be added.

In his talks with legislators, Roosevelt has insisted that Congress enact legislation for minimum wages and maximum hours. Defeated in the special session, the wage-hour bill now is resting in the House Labor committee.

House leaders have informed the President they will seek action on a wage-hour bill through the Rules committee.

SENATE FACES JAM

Tax revision, delayed beyond expectations in the House, may be passed by that body and sent to the Senate by March 1. "Passage of the $800,000,000 naval program is slated during February, while House action on regional planning legislation is uncertain.

The Senate still is the throes of a filibuster against anti-lynching legislation. Once a regular farm aid bill is scheduled to be voted by the Senate-House conferees tomorrow, and final passage of the measure is due next week.

$100,000,000 N. Y. Racket Heir Held Fast in Dewey Net

"Dixie" Davis' Bail $300,000, But Girl Gets Lawyer

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 3 (INS)—Smooth, shrewd J. Richard "Dixie" Davis, heir to "Dutch" Schultz's $100,000,000 a year policy "take," was in Racket Buster Tom Dewey's net today.

Davis brought $5000 in the police tipster market yesterday—not a high price, considering his standing in the criminal world, where he worked his way up from lawyer to policy czar—but New York's young district attorney found among "the boys" one willing to sell Davis for the $5000 reward offered by New York.

Red-headed Hope Dare—"I'd like to get my fingers in that red hair," said Mrs. Martha Delaney Davis—knows who "ratted" on "Dixie."

Beauteous Hope, formerly of the Broadway stage, was born Rose Rickert in Mineral Springs, Tex., and wore that country-style tag until judges of a Long Beach, Cal., bathing beauty contest in 1926 handed her first prize and she got ideas. Her latest idea was "Dixie," and when the smooth-as-lawyer disappeared, so did Hope.

RAIDERS SEIZE TRIO

It was Hope who was sharing "Dixie's" quarters when one of Dewey's assistants, with New York and Philadelphia police, surrounded a swank Philadelphia apartment building and walked in on the hunted lawyer, his girl friend and George Weinberg, their pal.

Weinberg's brother, Abe, was not present—in fact, he is commonly reported to be wearing a nice concrete tomb in the bottom of New York's East River, a tomb supplied by rivals of the Schultz mob.

They slapped $300,000 bonds on "Dixie," and "Dixie's" fertile brain set to work, and so did Dewey's fertile brain, and the question now is whether "Dixie" can figure a way to beat down the high bond before Dewey can get his extradition papers through.

BOND FOOLS HIM

"Dixie" showed that his brain was working when the bond was set.

"Might as well make it no bond," he said.

Pennsylvania has a law that a prisoner held without bond can make immediate application for habeas corpus. "Dixie" apparently had looked it up in advance. But they set a bond and he was fooled on that one.

After his arrest he talked twice with Lemuel B. Schofield, one of Philadelphia's best lawyers, a former district attorney and former director of public safety, but neither he nor Schofield would admit they had entered a client-attorney relationship.

Hope Dare arranged the affair. As soon as she was freed on $2500 bonds—a real estate man posted property—she got into action in "Dixie's" behalf. Charged only with being a "suspicious person," she agreed not to leave Philadelphia—not because of the police, but because of "Dixie."

Still to come was the meeting between "Dixie" and his wife, who left a sick-bed in N w York when she got the news that her man was arrested.

WIFE IS ANGRY

She was mad clean through when she learned red-headed Hope, masquerading under a black wig, was with "Dixie." They had had it out about Hope before, and "Dixie" had assured her that there was nobody else in his life.

Davis didn't seem to want to see his wife.

Police quoted him as saying:

"What do I want to see my wife for? I'll see her when I get out."

Mrs. Davis, who faces eviction from her New York apartment for non-payment of rent, had not heard or received money from "Dixie" since last July, when he vanished a few days before the indictment was returned against him in New York.

But Mrs. Davis believed, even when the news of his arrest came to her, that he would return.

"I never stop saying that, Hope Dare," Mrs. Davis said when she arrived here. "The red-heads always get the men, don't they?

"I'd like to get my fingers in that red-head's hair!"

HOPE DARE IN HER PRIME

HOPE DARE AND "DIXIE" DAVIS

Lockout Planned In Fur Trade

NEW YORK, Feb. 3 (INS)—Charging that Communists in control of the union are threatening the existence of the fur industry, 1200 manufacturers in the metropolitan area today prepared to stage a far-flung lockout a week from tomorrow.

The drastic step was voted in desperation by the Associated Fur Coat and Trimming Association as local CIO heads announced the rolls of their unions were open to Communists.

The International Fur Workers is headed by Ben Gold, a Communist. For weeks, according to members of the Employers' Association, negotiations have been deadlocked over union demands termed "impossible" by employers.

The lockout will affect 650 plants here, employing about 80 per cent of the workers in the industry. In normal times they employ about 15,000, but at present only between 30 and 35 per cent are working.

$65,000 Jewels Gone, Socialite Widow Says

Gave Them to So. End Man to Have Cleaned, She Charges

Mrs. Margot Richards, 39-year-old attractive widow and London society woman, now staying at a Back Bay hotel, today reported to police the loss of jewelry she said was valued at about $65,000.

She told Inspector William Philbrick at police headquarters she had given the jewelry to a man she met two years in Los Angeles so that he could have the gems cleaned.

Wearing a mink coat and accompanied by Inspector Philbrick, Mrs. Richards went to municipal court where, on her complaint, she was granted a warrant charging larceny against Charles Colton of Warrenton street, South End.

At the same time the English woman reiterated a theory advanced by police that "something may have happened to Colton."

She said the jewelry consisted of a $15,000 diamond necklace, rings, brooches, pearls and other necklaces, half of which were heirlooms. Mrs. Richards also told police only half of the jewelry was insured.

She declared that she arrived from England a week ago today and turned over the jewelry to Colton last Monday, asking him to have it cleaned for her and at the same time have one loose diamond in a ring reset.

Mrs. Richards said that since her first meeting with Colton in California, following an introduction by friends, she had seen him on four previous visits in this country.

The day after she had given Colton the jewels, Mrs. Richards said, she learned he had gone to New York.

1-Inch Antenna For Baby Radio

Lilliputian Air Wave Travels in Pipe

NEW YORK, Feb. 3 (AP)—Lilliputian wireless waves so short they travel inside a pipe and are picked up on an antenna only one inch high were placed before the radio engineering world here today by the Bell Telephone laboratories.

In pipes, the engineers were informed, these "midget" waves are like to travel like telegraphic messages, but without the limits imposed by a wire. A single small pipe, between two cities, for example, might carry all the telephone conversations wanted.

The waves exhibited ranged from four to eight inches long. They travelled through a 20-foot exhibition pipe. Like short radio waves these midgets reflect like light. Metal discs, used as mirrors, reflect the waves into the end of the pipe. The inch-long antenna picks them off at the other end. They have been piped a mile.

$50,000 Suit Loses In R. I. High Court

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 3 (AP)—The supreme court here today affirmed a superior court decision dismissing a $50,000 suit by Miss Iana Kinden, Brooklyn, N. Y., music teacher, against the estate of Miss Fanny Foster, Newport society woman. The suit charged breach of agreement.

Miss Kinden claimed she gave up her profession in 1933 to live with Miss Foster at "Ridgemere," her Newport residence. Miss Foster, she claimed, promised to furnish her with a home and subsistence after Miss Foster died. Miss Kinden claimed the agreement was not kept.

Rescues Brother In Fireworks Blast

SMITHFIELD, R. I., Feb. 3 (AP)—Ralph Vallente, 22, was critically injured when fireworks he was compounding exploded at a factory here today.

A brother, Alfred, working in an adjacent building, looked and saw the small building afire. He pulled his brother from the flames. The victim is in Rhode Island Hospital with burns of the face and body.

News Headlines Mould Speech

NEW YORK, Feb. 3 (INS)—"Newspaper headlines have been moulding American speech for decades," declares James L. Kilgallen in the February issue of Better English Magazine.

"However, in the days of the Civil War headlines were mere sign posts over news stories.

"It was not until William Randolph Hearst broke away from the old conservative single column heads into newsy, informative headlines spread as a 'banner' or 'streamer' across the front page that competing newspapers, following suit, made 'show windows' of their front page.

"The new headlines intrigued and interested the public, sold newspapers and blazed the way to the style of journalism that is in vogue all over the world today.

"Newspaper practice of 'telling the story in the head' so that 'he who runs may read' is slowly remaking our American speech."

Newport to Move On Rail Complaint

NEWPORT, Feb. 3—The Chamber of Commerce here today began its campaign to carry to the Interstate Commerce Commission its complaint against the New Haven railroad for discontinuing all passenger service out of this city.

Directors of the Chamber voted this move last night at their meeting, called to fight the railroad's plan to suspend service March 27.

Million to Pre-view N. Y. World's Fair

NEW YORK, Feb. 3 (AP)—Officials of the New York World's Fair, who expect to entertain 50,000,000 visitors in 1939, are going to see on April 30 if they can take it.

One million visitors will be invited to a preview of the exposition of that day.

Gasoline Tank Savings Bank

GAINESVILLE, Ga., Feb. 3—A gasoline tank makes a great bank, Pete Sherlock of Atlanta declares, only it's hard to get the money out.

Sherlock, turning in his old car for a new model, had mechanics pull the tank from the old one. Ripped open, $503.75 in silver poured out.

Recalls Green Regret Over 'Hetty' Prejudice

NEW BEDFORD, Feb. 3 (AP)—Colonel Edward H. R. Green lamented that his mother, Hetty Green, was very much misunderstood by many residents of this community, Harry A. Neyland, New Bedford artist, testified today on resuming the witness stand at the Green inheritance tax hearing before a federal master.

Recounting a conversation he had with Colonel Green in 1924 Neyland said the colonel told him he felt many residents harbored unjust feelings against Hetty Green because of her business dealings. He told Neyland, the latter said, it was his intention to do all he could to overcome this prejudice.

TEXAS GAINS POINT

Prospective witnesses in the courtroom included Burr Nil, airport manager, now in charge of Round Hill, and Mrs. Nill; also Mrs. Stuart M. Briggs of Fairhaven.

Texas' fight for $5,000,000 in income and inheritance taxes from the estate gained a point with testimony the millionaire considered himself a legal resident of the Lone Star State.

New York, Florida, Massachusetts and Texas are presenting evidence of Green's residence to prove they are entitled to the taxes on the $40,000,000 estate.

STAMP AID TESTIFIES

Miss Yvonne A. Jette, of New Bedford, testified she assisted Colonel Green with his coin collection and heard him claim Texas as his legal residence.

"He seemed to evidence pride in his Texas citizenship," she said.

Z. R. Davis, of South Dartmouth, who built a wharf on the Colonel's South Dartmouth estate, told the court he knew the millionaire as "Colonel Green of Terrill, Texas."

New Clue in R. I. Webster Murder

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Feb. 3 (AP)—George Keenan, ballistics expert of the Rochester police department, said three bullets fired from revolvers found by police in a house here were sent to Providence, R. I., police today in an attempt to solve a murder case there.

The guns, identified as among those stolen from an armory in New Haven, Conn., were found when police arrested three men on robbery charges in connection with a cigar store holdup.

In a letter to Rochester police, Providence authorities said Dr. George W. Webster was slain there July 16 by men who used a .45 calibre revolver.

The three men, seized identified themselves as Harold Costello, Fred Sardo and Peter Scalzo.

2 New Dirigibles Asked for U. S.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3 (AP)—A proposal to revive dirigible construction as a part of the national defense program developed today in the House naval committee.

Rep. O'Connell (D.) of Rhode Island said he would offer an amendment to the $800,000,000 naval expansion bill to set aside at least $8,000,000 to build two lighter-than-air cruisers.

He would stipulate that the ships be built in this country by American engineers, and would advocate that they be of a different type of design than the skeleton hull used in the ill fated Akron and Macon, whose destruction hailed experiments with dirigibles in this country.

'Hot' Music From Stove

HARRISBURG, Ill., Feb. 3 (INS)—"Swing music" from a laundry stove!

Mrs. I. W. Reynolds, who has no radio in her home, hears musical programs nightly from her stove, she said today.

Two radio technicians, Alfred Summers and K. E. Schonert, have examined the phenomena and give this explanation.

The domestic coal burning in the stove forms a clinker containing a mineral that contacts the stove grates and picks up the music. The grate functions as the "pickup" that touches the crystal, as in the old crystal radio set.

The "radio," for some reason, is most audible from nine to ten o'clock at night.

Royal Quarrel On Baby Name

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 3 (AP)—A difference between Queen Wilhelmina and her son-in-law, Prince Bernhard, over the naming of Crown Princess Juliana's new baby, Princess Beatrix Wilhelmina Armgard, was disclosed today.

Reliable sources said Wilhelmina consented to the name Beatrix, which means "bringer of happiness and peace," but which never before had been used by the House of Orange, only on condition that the child become Queen Wilhelmina if she should succeed to the throne.

The baby, born Monday, is next to her mother in the line of succession.

Soviet Icebreaker Off To Rescue 4 Near Pole

MOSCOW, Feb. 3 (AP)—The Soviet icebreaker Talmyr, sailed from Murmansk today to rescue the four Russian scientists of the "North Pole camp," drifting precariously on a small block of ice in Arctic seas off Greenland.

Murmansk is nearly 1000 miles from the position last reported by the campers, who said yesterday their refuge—a silk tent with an emergency radio mast for a tent pole—was perched on an ice base only 100 by 160 feet, a fragment split off by storms from their original floe.

The Talmyr carried three planes lashed to her decks to prevent washing away in storms. One was a seaplane to alight alongside the campers' iceblock, if the others failed to find a landing place.

The small Soviet steamer Murmanets, near the campers' floe, was under orders to go to the rescue and report her position every six hours.

Dr. Otto J. Schmidt, leader of the expedition which planted the camp near the North Pole eight months ago, was to leave for Greenland waters aboard another ice-breaker, the Yermak, within two or three days. He is directing rescue operations.

Vast Area to Be Bombed; American Missions in 20 Towns in Peril

SHANGHAI, Feb. 3 (AP)—Japan's armed forces marked out a huge area of East Central China as a new war zone today and asked Americans and other foreigners there to leave.

The Japanese embassy spokesman announced the decision, under which it was indicated many points would be subjected to bombardment in Nippon's drive to crush Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's armies.

The request was issued, he said, by the Japanese embassy at Peiping, the "new capital," where Japan has installed its provisional North China government.

American and other foreign embassies there received notes that, in view of the spread of warfare, neutral foreigners in the zone should evacuate and mark their properties so Japanese airmen would not bomb them.

It was recommended that Japanese authorities be given maps showing the location of such properties—most of which are missions—and that the Japanese be notified of the nature of the protective markings.

Roughly, the area specified in the warning extends from the Yangtze river, on the south, to a line running from the southern coast of Shantung province to Tahyuan, Shansi province capital, on the north.

It encompasses about 376,000 square miles—approximately equal to the combined area of New England, New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Ohio, Indiana and Michigan. Normally the population of this area is 146,000,000.

Included in the designated zone are about 20 towns in which American missions are located, and 23 which are the sites of other foreign missions.

On northern and southern borders of the designated war zone's eastern neck a half million Japanese and Chinese troops are struggling for possession of the Lunghai railway.

Goga Vows War Against Jews Will Continue

Rumania Premier Pens Own Statement That "They Must Go"

BUCHAREST, Feb. 3 (AP)—Octavian Goga, 57-year-old poet and premier of Rumania, today said in a written statement to the Associated Press that anti-Semitism and nationalism are enduring features of Rumanian policy.

He asserted anti-Semitism would continue even if he were removed from the premiership.

Goga was so eager that the United States should understand the aims of the government that he insisted on making a precise written statement.

"LIKE TOO MUCH SALT"

With a flourish of his fountain pen he wrote:

"Jews say of themselves they are the salt of the earth. That may be true. But when the whole contents of a salt shaker fall into the soup, the housewife is tempted to throw away the mess."

The premier, who has a poet's fondness for figures of speech, observed that too many Jews was exactly like too much salt.

"We are not the founders of the anti-Semitic movement in Rumania," Goga wrote. "Exactly 50 years ago Alexander Cuza, the first president of our National Christian party, first called attention to the Jewish problem here. (Cuza is minister without portfolio in Goga's cabinet.)

"Throughout the years of my literary and political activity I have been guided by the postulates of our nationalistic ideas. They are the formula for defense against Magyarization of our country, as attempted by former Hungarian rulers, and now find their expression in the slogan, 'Rumania for the Rumanians.'"

CALLS IT 'DEFENSIVE'

"Anti-Semitism is simply a measure of defense—which will vanish when its causes are eliminated."

Goga emphasized that the state was taking measures to protect itself against immigrants, largely Jews, who came after the World War.

"Those immigrants have taken permanent residence here without the legal right to do so. We do not know, because of their irregular methods of entry, what their number may be, but it is the common opinion that there are several hundred thousands.

"At present we are not so much interested in expelling them as in establishing the legal fact that they have no right to Rumanian citizenship.

"What will happen later? We have opened the question and the solution will surely be found after a thorough examination by an international forum.

"We recall the brutality with which England, Spain and, more recently, Germany and Russia freed themselves of a surplus of Semitic peoples."

Pretty English Girl Smashes Spy Ring

Scotland Yard Agent Links Rubens in Arsenal Plot

LONDON, Feb. 3 (INS)—Smartly dressed and perfectly poised, a beautiful young English girl stood in Bow street court today and told how she had broken up a spy ring attempting to obtain information regarding Britain's powerful new 14-inch naval guns.

Identified only as "Miss X" and as an anti-espionage agent working for Scotland Yard, the girl indirectly linked the Soviet Union to the conspiracy.

She also told of a couple known only as "Mr. and Mrs. Stephens" who participated in the plot, leading to speculation over a possible connection with the mysterious Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Rubens, who are listed in Moscow.

PLANS STOLEN

Secret plans were stolen from the Woolwich arsenal, she said, photographed and handed over to "Mr. and Mrs Stephens," who went to Moscow in November and never returned.

It was in November that the Rubens couple disappeared from Paris and proceeded to the Soviet capital.

The heroic role "Miss X" played in the conspiracy was revealed at the hearing of four men charged with conspiracy to disclose secrets of the new guns to a foreign power.

BAIL OPPOSED

Inspector Thomson of Scotland Yard opposed bail for the prisoners, stating:

"They could leave this country quite easily without passports for a certain country."

The four were remanded until Monday without bail. One of the accused was dismissed from Woolwich arsenal in 1928 as an avowed Communist.

The accused men were identified as F. E. Glading, Albert Williams, George Whomack and Charles Munday. All except Glading were employes at Woolwich arsenal.

'Quarantine' Talk Denied by Leahy

Naval Spokesman Says Policy Has Never Been Discussed With President

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3 (INS)—Flat denial that the navy has ever discussed plans with the President for "quarantining aggressor nations," was made before the House Naval Affairs Committee today by Admiral William D. Leahy, the navy's top spokesman.

Grilled for more than an hour by Representative Brewster (R) of Maine, concerning the need for the proposed $800,000,000 naval building program, the admiral refuted all implications that since Roosevelt's Chicago speech a quarantine policy had been considered.

"You have never discussed a method to quarantine aggressor nations?" Brewster asked.

"I have not."

"You have never made any reports to the President on the matter?"

"I have not."

"Has the Navy Department, to your knowledge, submitted reports?"

"The department has not."

CONFIDENTIAL INFORMATION

"No other measures in this connection have ever been taken by you or the Navy Department?" Brewster persisted.

"None," the Navy's chieftain declared flatly.

Admiral Leahy told Brewster that without an American navy "it would be comparatively easy for an Asiatic power to reach our shores with an armed force."

"That facilities have Asiatic powers for transporting an armed force here?" Brewster asked.

"I don't know."

"Don't you know the strength of their merchant marine fleets?"

"I can't divulge confidential information."

Brewster withdrew the question.

The New Englander then read from an address by Chief Justice Hughes, a former Secretary of State, quoting Hughes to the effect that this nation's navy was "unnecessarily extensive" before 1922. Brewster sought Admiral Leahy's opinion, but the latter declined to comment.

COULD SEIZE HAWAII

The admiral declared the navy regards the Hawaiian base as "very important." He said, however, that "it would be quite possible for Hawaii to be taken, if we did not have a fleet to protect it."

Representative Maas of Minnesota, ranking Republican on the committee, charged Brewster with "supporting the President's speech." While the Democratic members looked on in amusement, the two Republicans wrangled at length over Maas' contention that Roosevelt did not recommend a "quarantine policy."

Leahy denied that this country had ever started an armament race, adding that "on the contrary our policy has been the opposite—that of arms reductions."

Maas requested the admiral to submit figures to show how large a navy would be needed to defend both United States coasts at the same time.

Admiral Leahy "hazarded the guess that we'd need twice as many combat vessels" as now in existence, authorized or proposed, but said he would prepare the figures and submit them.

Prof. Moret Dead

PARIS, Feb. 3—Alexander Moret, 69, professor in the College de France, and noted Egyptologist, is dead today at his home here.

Britain Presses Duce To Join Pirate Patrol

LONDON, Feb. 3 (INS)—Bringing pressure on Mussolini to aid in tracing down Mediterranean "pirates," Britain's government today urged that all neutral merchant ships plying that danger-laden sea be armed at once.

This proposal was made by British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden to halt the new outbreak of submarine attacks and was part of a five-point program handed by Eden to the signatories of the Nyon anti-piracy accord.

In concert with France, Eden also brought pressure on Il Duce to help reinforce the Nyon anti-piracy patrol. This was done in hope of averting a new Mediterranean crisis.

At the same time, the admiralty banned the cruisers Southampton and Newcastle, now en route to Valencia on Spain's eastern coast, to join eight British destroyers in preparing to attack any "phantom" submarines attacking British merchant ships.

The recent sinking of the British freighter Endymion off Cartagena climaxed a situation in which three British ships and one Dutch vessel were attacked in the Mediterranean in the past three weeks by pirates.

Eden's program was outlined to the French, Italian, Greek, Egyptian, Turkish, Russian and Jugoslavian envoys—all representatives of nations which signed the Nyon accord. The plan called for authorizing armed neutral merchant ships as well as warships to retaliate immediately if attacked by a "phantom" submarine.

3 Die as Rebels Bomb U. S. Ambulance Train

PERPIGNAN, France, Feb. 2 (AP)—An American-French train of ambulances and food trucks was bombed today by insurgent planes in Spain with loss of three lives, Spanish government border authorities reported.

Twelve persons were reported seriously injured in the attack at Figueras, 15 miles below the French border. Late advices said the three killed were Spaniards who were near the caravan at the time of the raid.

Four American ambulance units were in the motorcade, the Spanish reports said. The mobile hospital equipment included an operating room, a laboratory and two cars for carrying wounded.

The motor train, most of which was said to have been taking French food and clothing to Barcelona, turned back toward the French border.

The caravan had stayed over night at Figueras on the road from Paris and Bordeaux and border reports said ten bombs were dropped as it was drawn up in a main street of the town.

Spanish government reports said the truck drivers and their helpers were French and were transporting food and clothing contributed to the Spanish government by French workers' committees.

Nazi Chief's Ouster Seen Over Wedding

BERLIN, Feb. 3 (INS)—Reichswehr officers appeared certain victors today in their campaign to remove Marshal Werner von Blomberg as war minister.

Whether immediately or after the lapse of some time, von Blomberg's retirement, due to the tangle over his recent marriage, is assured, according to army sources.

Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler is waiting for von Blomberg's formal resignation to come from his honeymoon retreat on the Isle of Capri.

Before the war minister left Berlin, however, he verbally gave up his post when he realized the extent of the "rebellion" against him.

Hitler, it was believed, hoped to calm the storm during von Blomberg's absence—at least sufficiently to permit him to retire gracefully in due time.

Even that now appears hopeless. Army sources advised that if von Blomberg remains, resignation of Colonel-General Werner von Fritsch, head of the Reichswehr, would follow with the backing of a dozen leading army officers.

Their contention is that von Blomberg, when he wed a young secretary, broke the army code regarding eligible marriages for officers. His action, it was said, is bound to have an adverse effect on army standards. Already garrisons are hives of gossip regarding the romance.

Fate of the war ministry is not yet decided. Lieutenant-General Walter von Reichenau, now secretary of state to the war ministry, is still a strong prospect to succeed von Blomberg, although several generals outrank him in age and prestige.

Find Singapore's Defense O. K.

SINGAPORE, Feb. 3 (INS)—Britain's mammoth war games got under way in earnest today as the attacking and defending naval air forces fought several sham engagements in which the umpires ruled the defenders were victorious.

The opposing forces established contact and went into immediate "combat" after two days and a night of research air patrolling—during most of which time the defenders had sought vainly to locate the attackers.

The first skirmish, while inconclusive, tended to show at least that Britain's huge base here is capable of standing off, if not completely repelling, a major aerial assault.

Cambridge Boy, 12, Eludes Police Hunt

As police entered their fourth day of search today, William Murphy, 12, of Windsor street, Cambridge, student at St. Mary's parochial school, was still missing from home.

The boy disappeared Monday noon, his worried mother reported to police yesterday.

10 Die as Naval Planes Collide

F. W. WOODRUFF, machinist's mate.

JULIAN RAWLS, radioman second class.

CRASHED IN SQUALL

Addresses of all the victims were given as San Diego.

The survivors were:

D. B. McCAY, aviation chief machinist's mate, San Diego.

V. G. HATFIELD, same rating, same address.

L. S. CARPENTER, same rating, same address.

The tragedy came after a day of stormy weather. The two planes and their crews were part of many air units, numbering 260 planes, participating in the maneuvers.

The tactical exercises, scheduled to end tomorrow, are being directed by Admiral Bloch, and are preparatory to the six weeks' annual war games scheduled for the Hawaiian-Aleutian islands sector beginning March 14.

Paulette Signed To Play Scarlett

PAULETTE GODDARD
Breaking With Charlie?

Long Search for Girl Lead in "Gone With Wind" Role Ends

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor
International News Service

(Copyright, 1938, By International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 3 (INS)—The longest and most extensive search for a screen heroine ended when Paulette Goddard was signed on a long term contract by David O. Selznick, producer of "Gone With the Wind," which, of course, only means that she will play Scarlett O'Hara.

David is still saying that he will announce his Scarlett in three weeks, but some of his associates are not as close mouthed as David and let it be known that Paulette had won the coveted role of the Southern vixen in Margaret Mitchell's best selling novel.

SURPASSED OTHERS

The inside story is interesting in that Paulette was chosen not from screen tests but from her rehearsals which were attended by George Cukor, the director, Sidney Howard, the playwright who adapted the novel for the screen, and David Selznick himself. All three agreed that she surpassed all other applicants for the role.

Since Paulette has never done anything outstanding on the screen, apart from "Modern Times," the Charlie Chaplin comedy in which she didn't speak a line, David feels he has a chance to develop her as a star. And if she clicks it is this writer's opinion that young Mr. Selznick will have a glittering, million dollar star on his hands.

TO FLORIDA FRIDAY

Paulette leaves for Florida Friday, accompanied by Constance Collier, well known British actress, who will coach her for the Scarlett role.

The official announcement that Paulette had been signed by the Selznick company gives rise again to the rumor that she and Charlie Chaplin are separating. Paulette has been seen without him night after night, always with the explanation that he was writing a screen play to co-star himself and Mrs. Chaplin, but Paulette's friends say that she has been very unhappy over her years of inactivity and at Charlie's tardiness in getting started on a script.

The new Scarlett was a chorus girl in Eddie Cantor's picture, "Kid From Spain," when Charlie first met her. No one knows now whether they are married or not—not even their close friends. Although they are believed to have been wed in 1934 on Charlie's yacht, their marriage has never actually been confirmed.

Housing Building Boom Seen Here

A boom in Massachusetts home-building, 50 per cent over the 1937 construction total, was seen today as the result of a survey following Senate passage of the federal housing act.

Thousands of inquiries have poured into the state branch of the federal housing administration from prospective home owners since the housing measure was speeded to Congress.

It was learned that nearly $450,000,000 is available for Massachusetts home construction from savings and co-operative banks, federal savings and loan associations and life and mutual insurance companies.

Ernest A. Johnson, secretary of the Building Trades Council, said labor would seriously consider an annual wage in the housing boom "provided the corporation involved is reliable and financially sound."

Several bankers criticized two changes in the act, the 15 per cent down payment on houses of less than $8000 and the 20-25-year loan period, all however expressed the belief that housing acceleration would lead the way out of the recession.

Nine U. S. Officers Lent to Peru Navy

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3 (INS)—Four officers of the United States navy and five petty officers were assigned by the Navy Department to the Peruvian navy, by authorization of President Roosevelt.

The officers, who will act in an advisory capacity to the Peruvian navy, are Capt. Bruce L. Canagh, who has been in command of a destroyer division; Capt. Emory D. Stanley, recently fleet supply officer of the Asiatic fleet; Commander Melville W. Powers, construction corps, and Lieut.-Commander Leo L. Pace, submarine commander and ammunition expert.

Ryan Case Figure Weds Virginia Girl

ARLINGTON, Va., Feb. 3.—Ned A. Parks, 24, formerly of Morganton, N. C., and Dorothea Redman, 23, were married here and are planning a honeymoon trip to Miami, Fla.

Parks recently was defendant in a non-support case at Morganton, N. C., brought by Mrs. Basil (Pat) Ryan, who charged in a warrant that he was the father of a baby born to her six weeks before she married the scion of the wealthy New York family last November.

New Catholic Nazi Ban

BERLIN, Feb. 3—Catholic young men's associations in the Aachen and Cologne dioceses were banned by the government here. They infringed continually on Nazi regulations concerning activities of confessional youth societies, it was charged.

Hanify Scores Frankfurter

Professor Felix Frankfurter by his actions has barred himself to ever sit on the United States Supreme Court, according to Edward B. Hanify, Holy Cross '33, the speaker at a dinner of the Holy Cross Club at the Copley Square Hotel.

Hanify is the son of Superior Court Justice Edward F. Hanify. The Rev. Francis A. Doian, S. J., president of Holy Cross, attended the dinner and termed Hanify "the most developed student he had ever met at the institution."

Hanify stated Frankfurter was a logical Supreme Court candidate had he not eliminated himself by his sympathy with Spanish Loyalists. He said the noted New Deal lawyer had aligned himself with government forces in Spain which had committed atrocities on the Catholic Church.

Victim of Tiger Fights Death

Children See Zoo Keeper Attacked

NEW YORK, Feb. 3 (INS)—Ludwig Herz, a keeper, was fighting for his life today after being attacked by "Tammany," five-year-old Bengal tiger, at Prospect Park Zoo.

A group of horrified children witnessed the attack.

Herz's right arm had to be amputated.

"Tammany," who was christened by former Governor Al Smith, was in a cage with a female named "Queenie," when Herz began cleaning the cage. Herz had just thrust a long handled broom through the bars when "Tammany" attacked.

Sinking claws into the forearm, the tiger dragged Herz's right arm into the cage and chewed it up to the shoulder.

Screaming children brought aid.

Log Cabin Fires Kill 3 Babies

HOULTON, Me., Feb. 3 (INS)—Log cabin fires here and at Lincoln today had taken the lives of three babies and sent a fourth critically burned to Eastern Maine General Hospital at Bangor.

Shirley Faulkner, 11 months old, was burned to death in her crib when a sheet iron stove was overturned, firing a one-room log cabin. Two other children escaped.

At Lincoln, Jessie Glidden, 2, and her sister, Carmen, 3, were burned to death when fire destroyed a two-room log cabin. Four-months-old Shirley Glidden was rescued by her mother and rushed 50 miles by automobile to the hospital at Bangor, where doctors held little hope for her recovery.

Dean Ragsdale Dies

ATHENS, Ala., Feb. 3—Following a heart attack, Dr. Joseph Ragsdale, 69, dean emeritus of Athens College, is dead today at his home here.

School 'Love Strike' Ends

Principal Resigns; Coach Fate in Air

DOTHAN, Ala., Feb. 3 (INS)—The week-long "love strike" at the Rehobeth school against the dismissal of Basketball Coach Hugh Wynn was settled today with the resignation of Principal B. L. Ward. Classes will resume Monday.

What will happen to Wynn, who was ousted on the charge that he dated girl students and wrote them notes in classes, remained hazy.

Settlement of the strange walkout came after a two hour meeting of the Houston County board of education and a committee representing school patrons and the board of trustees.

Wynn appeared before the board and presented his side of the case, saying that he dated pretty 18-year-old Mary Grimsley, but that they were engaged to be married.

Wins Jury Trial In Taxi Suit

Mrs. Mae Wolfe of Boston today had won right to a jury trial in a suit in connection with the death of her husband, Police Sergeant John Wolfe, in a decision handed down by the Supreme Court.

Wolfe died in 1931 as the after effects of biting his tongue, allegedly when his police cruiser was struck by a taxicab. In an earlier suit before a Suffolk County jury the trial justice directed a verdict in favor of the cab company.

In the Supreme Court's ruling, Mrs. Wolfe was granted the right to jury trial in the case. The opinion stated that a finding was warranted that alleged negligence of the defendant was the proximate cause of Wolfe's death.

Baby Becomes Uncle

NORTH ADAMS, Feb. 3—Although only three days old, a 15-pound baby boy became an uncle through the birth of a baby boy to his 23-year-old sister.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE
Caused by Tired Kidneys

Many of those gnawing, nagging, aching backaches people blame on colds and strains are often caused by tired kidneys and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about a pint a day or about 3 dozen drops of waste.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes first filters don't work well, these poisons may start staying in the blood. Then backache, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY GO ROUND

"Washington Merry-Go-Round," by Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen, sprightly and informative column on the inside activities of political Washington, is now a daily feature of the Boston Evening American. It will also appear in the Boston Sunday Advertiser every Sunday.

By DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—You can expect increasingly important developments in American policy in the Far East from now on. There may be nothing sensational; it all depends. But certainly you will find a steady tightening of Roosevelt's attitude toward the Japanese.

Several straws in the wind point clearly to this. Surface straws are the fact that both Secretary of State Hull and Under Secretary Welles have dropped all routine work, are handling only Far Eastern problems. Very few other international questions are brought to their attention.

Behind this is the conviction, borne out by every dispatch from China, that the Japanese are determined to push the white man completely out of Eastern Asia and the islands of the Pacific and that the whites nations must stick together.

Some of the questions now being discussed by the State Department with France and Great Britain are (1) increasing the size of the Panama and Suez Canals in order to permit the passage of giant battleships, (2) how large these future battleships will be, and (3) possible strategy to be used by U. S., British and French naval forces in Far Eastern waters in case of emergency.

However, these are mere details in a broader and much more important plan for cooperation which is still in process of formation. With this plan Roosevelt may make one last prodigious effort to unsnarl some of the world's troubles before admitting the inevitability of war.

BORAH HINT—During Senator Borah's luncheon with Roosevelt the other day, he dropped some pointed hints about Attorney-General Cummings and Donald R. Richberg which were not flattering to either.

Borah mentioned no names, but even Senator Holt of West Virginia would have understood what he was driving at.

"I think it is a very questionable proceeding Mr. President," Borah said, "when the government is pressing anti-monopoly charges against a group of big manufacturers, for a high officer of the government and another gentleman, who once occupied a high official position, to undertake to settle the matter between them out of court."

(Borah was referring to the consent decree negotiations which Richberg and William Stanley, ex-assistant attorney-general, conducted with Cummings on behalf of the Big Three motor companies while a Milwaukee grand jury was considering indicting the firms.)

"Either the charges are valid or they are not valid," continued Borah. "If they are not, then no action should have been started in the first place. If they are, then the matter should have been left to the judgment of the grand jury.

"Unquestionably the existing anti-monopoly laws need strengthening. But it seems to me there is no use doing that if what laws we have are going to be negated by deals between officials, whose duty it is to enforce them, and those who are accused of violating them."

Roosevelt listened attentively, but made no comment.

A CASE IN POINT—After several months in which business leaders have pleaded with government authorities to meet them half way for a conciliatory solution of their problems, the firm of J. P. Morgan, which has never established any great record for conciliation, decided to try its own particular brand.

So George Whitney, a Morgan partner, sent a letter to Chairman Douglas of the Securities and Exchange Commission proposing a plan by which the United Corporation, giant Morgan-controlled utility holding company, could escape registration under the Holding Company Act. Douglas' reply was brief and to the point.

Co-operation in evasion of the law, he replied, was not the type of co-operation the SEC planned for business.

A week or so later he received a long distance telephone call from Whitney, who informed him that (1) the directors of United Corporation had decided unanimously to register under the Holding Company Act; (2) that no conditions were attached to the offer; and (3) that the registration would be filed prior to the Supreme Court's decision on the Electric Bond & Share case which tests the constitutionality of the act.

Delighted with this change of front, Douglas invited Whitney to Washington.

MANY A SLIP—Whitney came to see Douglas on the same day that Thomas W. Lamont, Owen Young, and several members of the original brain trust conferred with the President and urged co-operation between business and the government. But the message Whitney bore was a different brand of co-operation.

In brief, he informed Douglas and the SEC that certain "intangibles" had arisen since his telephone conversation causing the directors of United Corporation completely to reverse themselves. Therefore they would delay registration until after the Supreme Court had acted.

Whitney did not go into details regarding this abrupt change of attitude. But from other Wall Street sources the SEC obtained this information: When John E. Zimmermann, head of the United Gas Improvement Corporation of Philadelphia, Clarence Groesbeck of Electric Bond & Share Co., and Wendell Willkie, president of the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation—all violent Roosevelt foes—heard of the Morgan plan to haul down the flag and register, they telegraphed sulphurous protests and demanded a no-compromise stand.

All of the above gentlemen are important Morgan clients. So the banking firm pulled in its horns and ran for cover.

LOST DINNER—Young Chairman Bill Douglas listened to Whitney's explanation with a wry smile.

"This is a great disappointment to me," he said finally, "and I'll tell you why. First, before the House of Morgan by its action passes up a great opportunity to perform an act of outstanding business statesmanship. Second, because your run-out costs me a dinner.

"When you phoned that you would register, a friend high in the Administration warned me that the Morgan people talk big but act little. I bet him a dinner. He wins."

United States Air Power Predicted World's Best

By ROBERT G. NIXON

International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3 (INS)—To protect the United States from invasion and to assure air superiority in the event America is forced into war, the army and navy have built a combined air force which today is ranked by authorities as one of the world's most formidable.

In an amazingly short time—a matter of less than three years—America's air force has risen from a seventh rate power to the front rank.

America's combined army and naval air strength today is approximately 3000 planes—the swiftest, hardest-hitting, most heavily armed and efficient military planes possessed by any nation.

By the end of 1940 this air force will have been increased to nearly 6000 fighting ships.

The army air force today has in excess of 1400 modern all-metal fighters and bombers, with some of additional training ships of a slightly older type approaching obsolescence. It has 1000 planes on order and will purchase an additional 500 during the coming year. New planes are being delivered at the rate of two a day.

FACTORIES BUSY

The navy has 1200 top flight fighters and approximately 800 on order, with an additional 500 to be purchased during the next 12 months. It now has 800 more on order which are being put into commission as fast as the factories can turn them out.

The new defense act calls for an increase of navy planes by 1000, that is from the present authorization of 2050 to 3050.

The army has an authorized strength of 2320 which it expects to attain on a permanent basis, allowing for normal annual washouts and obsolescences, by 1940.

With its present aircraft carriers' strength, the navy can today hurl 500 planes into the air several thousand miles from continental United States. Two new aircraft carriers will increase this fighting strength by another 150 planes.

"We are confident that today we can successfully defend the United States from attack in the air by any aggressor, or any conceivable combination of aggressors," a high military authority told International News Service.

FIGURES DECEPTIVE

Comparative tables on the number of airplanes possessed by the various powers show the United States outnumbered by some of the other nations, but these figures are deceptive and do not present the real picture of air strength, experts say.

These figures give the following military air strength: Russia 8000, Great Britain 4500, Italy 4450, Germany 4200, France 4000 and Japan 2500.

"Efficiency and striking force are the real index to air power," the military authority explained. "Range, speed, armament, bomb carrying ability, design, ruggedness of engine and hull construction, modernness and the industrial capacity of a nation to replace destroyed planes are major factors in determining air strength—not simply the number of planes.

"The United States has the newest, fastest, most formidably armed air force in the world. Its industrial capacity for airplane construction is unequaled by any nation."

Gen. Johnson Says:

DELIVERY COSTLY
"Food Trust" Hinted

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 3—Norman Cousins, associate editor of Current History, has written a very significant piece for its February issue called "Food For the Trust Busters."

HUGH S. JOHNSON

According to this article, there is a sock-full of unexploded dynamite kicking around somewhere between the Federal Trade Commission, the Senate and the White House.

It is a report on agricultural income and the consumer's dollar, which cost the Trade Commission $150,000. It is said to have been suppressed, or at least not printed and published due to some sinister pressure, presumably by lobbyists of the "food trust." This is presumed because the report is alleged to show that there is a food trust powerful enough to fix not only the price which farmers receive for some cash products, but also the price which consumers pay.

The facts or findings are not very fully developed in the article, but the assertion seems to be that the "food trust" operates principally on most dairy products, flour and many bakery products, and all meats and animal fats.

This is the hottest kind of a potato. If there is an extortionate monopoly controlling what people eat, the public will have no patience with that. If the recent fiery Administration threats of big-time trust-busting mean what they say, this is the most dramatic political field in which they could operate.

But in reading Mr. Cousins' article carefully, I do not see that the case is completely made there. There has undoubtedly been a great corporate concentration in the dairy products business. The large flour milling companies have grown greater. The baking business has largely gone over to chains. The packers long have controlled the bulk of the butchering business. But to pass from that to a conclusion of extortionate control over prices is not so easy.

* * *

Prices have gone up, but even that is not proof. All food prices have risen. It was governmental policy to make them rise. From whence did they rise? From destructive depression lows.

It is true, also, that profits in these industries have increased. But from whence? From destructive depression losses.

The significant figure in all these monopoly assaults is the percentage of profit to the alleged monopolist in the price he charges.

Everybody knows that the character of service in all these industries has increased marvelously. The essential question is—is the public interest impaired? Is the charge for that service too great? This article is completely silent on that point and that is the only point about which the public cares very much.

The truth is that our distribution system is terrible. The farmer gets too small a proportion of the consumer's price. Waste and duplication in getting his product to the consumer's table costs too much—not in extortionate profit, but in an inefficient system.

* * *

I once saw a study of bread distribution in New York city. It showed as many as 16 bakery wagons daily serving the bread counters of retail stores and piling up their product competitively, with a result in stale bread returns sometimes as high as 60 per cent—not to mention the tremendous expense of duplicated distribution systems.

The system for concentrating perishables in the metropolitan markets is an unregulated mess which results in alternate gluts and shortages which often rob the shipper of any net return at all.

Congress, in 1921, conducted one of the most exhaustive studies ever made on this subject. It revealed this condition of waste and duplication, but nobody ever did anything about it.

There is good ground for believing that greater, rather than less, concentration in our food gathering and distribution system would be better for both farmers and consumers. But if there is greater concentration, there would have to be public controls rigid enough absolutely to insure against extortion in either price or profits.

Pensioned W. U. Men Are Honored

A testimonial dinner to three fellow workers, recently pieced on the pension list, was given last night by 150 traffic employes of the Western Union Telegraph Co. at the Western Union Cafeteria on Congress street. The three men for whom the dinner was given, whose total amount of service was 124 years, are Harry L. Flynn, A. C. Thompson and Daniel Carter. Guest speakers were William H. O'Brien, veteran telegrapher, and now head of the commission of public relations for the federal government on PWA, and Patrick J. Moynihan, state commissioner on administration and finance.

Surveys for New Highway Resumed

Surveys of the old Middlesex turnpike in preparation for construction of a new highway between Boston and Lowell were renewed today by state engineers, according to an announcement by the State Public Works Department.

YOU CAN BE BEAUTIFUL

Concentrate on Wrinkle-Area

DELICATE as a moth's wing though your skin may be . . . with the translucent pastels of the Virginia Bruce type . . . or clear-blown and bronze rose and strong as the wind —if you're the outdoor girl . . . nevertheless, lines and crepiness will attack it in precisely the same spots. It is up to you, therefore, to know the newest step in protecting and softening the skin to prevent or erase the threatening age-marks, which is Arline Gould's subject today.

Hints That Boost Your Beauty

MUCH attention is given to the hair. Millions are spent on "over-head." Tresses are trimmed, shampooed, waved, dyed, bleached or eked out with spare parts from the hair goods department. But what about the scalp? It doesn't even get a few crumbs from the beauty feast.

Without good circulation and a scalp that is cushiony, the hirsute foliage hasn't much of a chance to be healthy or abundant. It is like a plant trying to grow in poor soil.

Make it a practice to give yourself a five-minute scalp massage every night. There's no need of disturbing the finger wave; slip your fingers under it, spread out thumbs and fingers and lift the flesh away from the bones.

Thumb the back of your neck. There are large arteries there that carry food to every hair follicle. If possible, brush your hair before the massage. Some waves won't stand grooming; others will. If the hair is dry, brushing will stimulate the sebaceous glands that lubricate the shafts and keep them in normal condition.

Brand New Super Emollient for Those Tragic Give-Away Spots

By ARLINE GOULD

IT'S A DISMAL moment when you come across definite marks on your face of the passage of the years in the wan morning light that comes in the mirror window. You can be brave about lot of things, you can "face the music and dance" in any number of crises. But not this one. For only you realize how hopefully you've been tending your complexion, being generous to a fault with all the rich, "feeding" unguents.

Of course they've done some good. But it does seem that certain spots need something akin to a miraculous lift from extra wear and tear. And that's where you've whacked the nail squarely on its elusive little head. For the first time in cosmetic history you can buy a cream concentrate, a super-emollient of multiple strength intended solely for those danger spots around the eyes, beside the mouth and in front of the ears. In these vulnerable areas age makes its first inroads.

Something considered truly precious, it is enclosed in an ivory jar set in a pedestaled box, and in the transparent composition of its cover is sunk the symbol of rarity, a blue rose.

Its magnificent quantity of costly oils makes it fairly expensive, but using its concentrated richness only where it is needed will give you two months or more of its wonderful bulwark against crepiness and lines.

You'll be accused of having discovered the fountain of youth near your own back yard . . . and of despicable selfishness in not letting the secret out . . . after the concentrate has tackled crow's feet, frown or laughter lines, or scaly patches and freed your face of them!

* * * *

There's an awareness of its beautifully rich consistency in the mere touch of it on your fingertips. It is heavy and full-bodied, rich old ivory in color, and ever so lightly scented with what might be valley lilies, or minute blossoms from a rock garden.

Its secret of success is that it has a large quantity far above any other such preparation of a certain rich extract which is usually doled out only in small quantities in the finest emollients.

To learn more about the brand new cream concentrate which will make short work of danger spots that harbor wrinkles and scaly patches, phone Arline Gould, LIBerty 4000, week-days until five, or write her at the Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Gold IS WHERE YOU FIND IT

From the Novel by Clements Ripley

A Cosmopolitan Picture to be released soon by Warner Brothers

CHAPTER 9

"Just so you don't!" Lance lounged to his feet as a boy brought two horses around the corner. "Come on, Whitney. Let's—" A third horse had appeared.

Serena tested her girths, gathered her reins and swung a neat foot over the saddle. "I certainly have no intention of tagging you," icily. "It so happens I'm going to my orchard."

Hoofs clop-clopped sedately. Jared made desperate attempts at conversation. Coldly, carefully, Serena replied. Yes, the climate of California was very agreeable. Yes, she'd always heard that New England climate was bleakly—

Jared stared. "Ah, say! It's way too nice a day to stay mad? Can't you forgive Lance and me? Your—your what-you-call-'ems a, grand!" he went on desperately. "Get the recipe, if you'll give it to me—send my sisters—" he shot Lance an agonized glance.

Lance gave him a sudden grin. He put his horse into a run. As he swept by, he swept off Serena's wide hat and sailed it ahead down the road. "Catch it, spral!" he whooped.

His horse uncoiled like a spring. She shot past him—swung down in a lithe swoop and swept it up at a gallop.

"Spral" he taunted. "Show-off!"

"Kid's trick!" she countered joyously. "You couldn't have done it if I'd been ready."

SERENA'S VICTORY

For a couple of miles they shouted and raced happily, trying horse tricks.

But Lance was still the disciplinarian. At a fork, he reined in. "Well—there you are," he told her. "We're going this way."

Serena's face fell. Then, as one who stakes everything on one cast, she gathered herself. "Mr. Whitney, would you like to see my orchard?" "Don't let her bother you, Whitney—"

"Why, Miss Ferris, I'd like to."

Lance's jaw dropped. He hadn't even a reply to Serena's furtively out-thrust, pink tongue. He watched them ride off. Jared was leaning toward her, talking eagerly.

* * *

June came and went with a furnace blast—the dry wind off the desert burning the heat in endless waves, burning the newly greened hills brown, rasping nerves and tempers, dying at last into the hot stillness of midsummer. And through the tired days, through the hot, still nights, the wheat filled, turned golden—golden—

Colonel Ferris glanced at the red rim peering above the mountains. He walked Gavotte the baked half-mile to the barns.

YANKEE INGENUITY

This might be the wheat-harvest, the madhouse of the year, but no horse left the Big House faster than a walk while he had his strength.

"Heya, Enoch. 'S' trouble this morning?"

"Colonel, the's a reaper busted in the west fawty."

"Well—fix it!"

"Fix it! Ain't 'at Yankee friend o' Mist' Lance's under it this minute."

"Getting it in shape to run, is he?"

"I'm Yankees, they'll get anything to run! Give him a wrench an' a oil-can, he'll run 'at reaper down the rivey for a side-wheel passenger boat." The Colonel wheeled Gavotte for the west forty.

A far-off dot became the reaper, a gaunt, helpless skeleton in the vast, golden shimmer. Two saddled horses stopped passively in the wheat-stubble beside it, and Serena's white hat swam in the heat-waves.

Jared crawled out from under the machine. He had stripped off his shirt for the job, and appeared now in breeches and undershirt.

For a week after Golden Moon, like most of the smaller hydraulic mines, had shut down for the summer drought, he had fretted over the wasting of a reservoir, like the English dam up on Feather river. Then, at Lance's urging, he had come to Bannockburn.

THEY DISAGREE

Gavotte swung wide of the reaper and stopped, her dainty feet planted. Jared wiped his hands on a wisp of wheat-straw and reached for his shirt. Unofficially in the past two weeks he had become something between a field superintendent and a trouble shooter.

"She'll mow now," Jared announced. "Sprung shackle was all. I put in a good jag of baling wire. Just as good as the steel they put in her first-off."

"Supposed to be a good reaper." To the Colonel any piece of machinery was an evil mystery. "You don't like it."

"Don't like my farm machinery." Jared tugged the shirt over his head. "Piped steel and cast iron. Daub 'em up with red and green paint to hide flaws. An engineer's go crazy trying to work with what a farmer has to use. Beg pardon, Serena."

"Don't beg mine! Don't I have to send to France for pruning shears because there isn't a decent set made here?"

"Tariff," % Jared said briefly. "Don't have to. Oh, you, Colonel, we Vermonters vote Republican, but we're not fools if we are farmers. Tribune levied on the country by the city. 'Course we don't use this kind of mose much." He jerked a thumb at the machine. "Wasteful!"

"I'd admire to see you plant six thousand acres without it."

"Wouldn't try to farm six thousand in one lump. Or to rent. Split it up and sell in small lots. A man that's got gumption to own his land'll farm it right. A renter doesn't care," Jared turned to his horses.

"Whoopee! You takin' a wallop at the poor ole tenant system, too? Whitney, I know us landlords are supposed to be blood-suckers, but what would you do?"

"HOT AND TROUBLED"

"Landlords?" Jared laughed shortly. "It's the tenants that are the blood suckers. Always a certain number of men too shiftless, ever to own anything. They'll rent. When they've dragged the heart out of the land, they'll move on. They keep a landlord poor. I'd get rid of 'em."

"No, you wouldn't. You'd give 'em a crop and a furnish. You'd have to. If you didn't, those poor fellows'd perish to death."

"Let 'em! Man hasn't got fight and gumption enough to get ahead, why should I support him?"

"Son, you kind of hot and troubled with machinery and such-like. Come evening, you get back on the verandah, get you a bath, and a clean shirt, maybe a julep, you'll feel different.

"Daughter, I hate to trouble you, but Lance is superintending over east, and I want Whitney to look at the riverfield—if you'll be so kind, sir. I got yo' orchard mules and a crew coming out. Yonder they come now."

She nodded. He swung Gavotte and was off.

Jared trotted toward the riverfield. He liked the Colonel, and yet the man was a continued puzzle to him. Brains—force—and yet his farm was a madhouse. Everything run higgledy-piggledy. Yet, the Colonel's work somehow seemed to get done.

Colonel Ferris sat close to Gavotte's clean run. Now there was a Yankee for you! Studying about a little waste—and what all around you till you couldn't seen an end to it! A mannerly Yankee, though. And Lance was steadier. Fellow knew a horse, too, and the dogs liked him. Well, you never know.

Serena's small, hard hands drove her reaper down the endless, golden aisle.

DARK DAYS LOOM

To Colonel Ferris, winter was a time of cold winds, of rain and mud-splashed, sodden boots. A time of endless, financial work—work which the Colonel, who loved the drive of plowing, the rush and sweep of the harvest, hated. The selection of seed. Plows and harrows and gear to be got early. The books—there it must be confessed, the Colonel sighed. "He'd flex cramped, ink-stained fingers. "Put it in the under-and-over account!"

And this year was added the levees with their constant growing expense, and the slow threat that now, more and more, hung over the valley.

Continued Tomorrow.

Chic House Frock

By MARIAN MARTIN

No matter how frantically you are dashing through morning chores or how thoroughly you're cleaning from attic to cellar, this simple frock ingeniously keeps you looking fresh and tidy.

Order Pattern 9621 and set to work . . . It will be finished before you know it . . . ready to slip into! And now for a surprise!

Pattern 9621 may be ordered only in misses' and women's sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16, View A requires 2¼ yards 36 inch fabric and 4¾ yards ric-rac.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for each pattern.

Send your order to Boston Evening American Pattern Department, 233 West 18th street, New York, N. Y.

Rhythm in Your Walk

WALKING can be like dancing when you wear a skirt that's pleated in full flares from hip to hem! It it's an extravagant dose of gaiety that you need to put you on your toes . . . mentally and physically . . . take it in this print silk of rich adobe rose-rust color, with frocks of white confetti dots. And there's cool contradiction of its riotous mood in the placid white blossoms at the throat—an ingenious cross between gardenias and waterlilies, we judge.

Miss Florence Dysart models this mid-season print, which manages to tell a prophetic story of fashions to come. Note the lengthened bodice, which smooths down the line of hip to new grace. There's not an extra bit of fullness there, nor in the waistline, which is very small. But the feeling of rhythm is again picked up in the high cross-drape at the shoulders. Budget—around sixteen dollars.

For shopping information on the frock, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, Liberty 4000, week-days until five, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

Short Suit Cards in Bridge

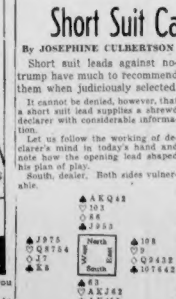

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Short suit leads against notrump have much to recommend them when judiciously selected.

It cannot be denied, however, that a short suit lead supplies a shrewd declarer with considerable information.

Let us follow the working of declarer's mind in today's hand and note how the opening lead shaped his plan of play.

South, dealer. Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 N T	Pass	5 ♠	Pass
6 N T	Pass	Pass	Pass

South bid three notrump over one spade, instead of three diamonds, because he did not want his Ace-Queen of clubs led through.

West finally decided in favor of the diamond Jack. It was not a happy choice! Declarer won with the Ace and led the deuce of hearts toward dummy's ten. West decided against giving up his heart control and played low. The ten held and declarer carefully noted, and "believed," East's play of the nine spot. Now, declarer took a diamond finesse to his own ten spot. It held and the Ace and Queen of clubs were then laid down. West won and shifted to a low spade. Dummy won and cashed the club Jack, declarer discarding his low diamond.

West, to keep his spade protection, let go a heart. Declarer now led a heart to the Ace and then cashed the diamond King. On this play West could not find a safe discard. To let go another heart would be to establish declarer's entire suit. To let go a spade was equally unsatisfactory. In short, West was unmercifully squeezed and the slam became a laydown.

Beauty Hints

FOR the girl who suffers from a dingy complexion, which is speckled here and there with black points or shows up a pustule now and then, there is nothing better than the alternating cold and hot shower. It has an exhilarating effect upon the circulatory system. It helps the skin to function as an eliminating organ.

When one feels dull and out of sorts, this kind of a bath is a stimulant. It is helpful to the woman who is tired and sees the opera evening party ahead of her.

MEN LOVE Peppy GIRLS!

If you are happy and peppy and full of fun, men will take you places. But, if you are cross and always tired out, men won't like you. Men don't like "quiet" girls. They want girls who are full of pep.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling thru" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening discomforts from the functional disorders which women endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Pinkham's Compound, made especially for women from Nature's wholesome herbs and roots, has helped women for over 60 years.

Make a note NOW to get a bottle today WITHOUT FAIL from your druggist—let Nature help you be the lively, peppy girl you should be.

Listen, World!

Our Discontent Is a Habit

By ELSIE ROBINSON

SHE'S always discontented. Ever since she was a child she has been that way.

No, her life hasn't been marked by tragedy. She has always had enough to eat and wear, a decent home, kindly friends. But, somehow, she could never be quite happy.

Always there was that nagging sense of failure and frustration . . . always discontent, spreading its grime over every circumstance.

"I suppose it's my disposition," she sighs, "but that doesn't make it any easier to bear. How I envy people who are born contented. They just seem to draw good luck to them. They always have nice things happening to them. If I could only be happy-go-lucky like that . . . if I could only be contented—"

And of course she could be contented if she really wanted to. For discontent isn't an inherited handicap . . . we are not "born contented or discontented—"

Discontent a Habit

Discontent is a habit . . . A deliberate habit from which we can break ourselves as surely as we break any other silly or vicious habit.

How does that habit start? Simply enough. Some trivial childhood hurt . . . the other boy has a better bike . . . the other girl has a prettier dress . . . the other kids live in nicer houses than you do, have parties and you don't. So self-pity and resentment start.

WHY SHOULD YOU HAVE ALL THE BAD BREAKS? WHY SHOULD FATE PICK ON YOU? And yet they tell you that you should be "contented with your lot" and "count your blessings!" WELL, YOU WON'T! You'll show 'em!

Just for spite. You won't like anything! And so, out of your hurt and envy and resentment, comes discontent . . . comes the habit of picking flaws in everything. A queer, unhappy habit. What satisfaction can you get out of it? But you do get satisfaction—a sickly, secret sense of power. The sense of spiting Fate, spiting society—

Making yourself seem important by making yourself and everyone you contact miserable.

It's Up to Yourself

And yet, at any moment you could have dropped that misery—if you had so wished. At any moment you could have been contented, instead of discontented—

For it's entirely up to us whether we're happy or unhappy in this life. We can't help what happens to us, but we can help what happens in us.

Two people will meet exactly the same circumstances—one person will be contented, the other discontented. That isn't because the situation seems ideal to the first person. No situation is ever 100 per cent satisfactory to anyone. There's always a flaw—always a chance to grouch if you're looking for one.

One person will look for that because he has acquired the habit of looking for flaws and grouching about them—

The other persons will pass by the flaws and look for pleasant possibilities, because he has acquired the habit of looking for pleasure.

Self-Indulgent Habits

Does that mean that we should go around grinning like Cheshire cats . . . being a little ray of sunshine when everyone else wants to sit in the shade? IT CERTAINLY DOES NOT.

But it does mean that we can make our own terms with life. We can be chronically happy or unhappy, just as we please, despite the shenanigans of fortune.

And if you, personally, don't please to be happy—if you choose to squawk—what then? By all means, go ahead and do as you please.

Wallow in gloom if that is your favorite pastime. But don't expect the world to applaud your act. For it's not any more noble or necessary to be discontented than it is to chew your nails. THEY ARE BOTH DISGUSTING, SELF-INDULGENT HABITS.

Pot Roast With Potatoes and Rich Gravy

By MARTHA LEE

WHEN YOU do your week-end marketing tomorrow or Saturday look at the pot-roasts displayed by your butcher. You won't be able to resist them.

Pot roasts with browned potatoes and rich brown gravy are family favorites throughout the country.

Cold winter winds make greater need for warmth and for plenty of substantial food.

A steaming, savory pot roast brought to the table on a wintry day . . . what could be better? Then, too, they are easy to serve and easy to prepare.

Choose large chunky cuts for pot-roasts—ones which need long, slow cooking to make them tender. Beef chuck, rump and heel of the round are ideal cuts for the purpose. You may want to have these cuts boned and rolled at the market in order to make carving easier.

Seasoning and vegetable combinations can be varied to suit the tastes of your particular family. Some suggestions are given for preparing this flavorful meat dish that has deserved its popularity.

YANKEE POT ROAST

4 lbs. heel of the round
1 teaspoon salt
Pinch of pepper
2 tablespoons flour
Suet
3 bay leaves
Sprigs of parsley
Raisins
6 carrots
6 onions
6 potatoes
1 small turnip.

Have pot roast larded or wrapped in a thin layer of fat. Wipe meat with a clean damp cloth. Sprinkle with salt, pepper and flour. Try out a piece of suet in a heavy kettle, put in meat and brown on all sides. Add enough water to cover the bottom of the kettle. Add bay-leaf, parsley and a handful of raisins. Cover and simmer until done, allowing 45 minutes per pound. The last hour of cooking, add whole carrots, onions, potatoes and sliced or diced turnip. It will be necessary to add extra seasoning for the vegetables. Put meat on a platter and arrange vegetables around it. Thicken stock with a little flour mixed to a smooth paste with cold water. Season gravy, if necessary. Serves 6.

SPICED POT ROAST

Dredge pot roast with flour and brown well on all sides in hot suet or fat. When nicely browned, season with salt, and pepper, add 2 onions sliced, 2 bay leaves and 1 whole clove. Pour over it ¼ cup of diluted vinegar, cover tightly and cook slowly until done, about 3 hours. Add water as the liquid cooks away, but only a little at a time. The remaining liquid makes an excellent spicy sauce to serve with the pot-roast. Carrots cooked with the spiced pot roast take up the spicy flavor and are really delicious.

SWEET SOUR POT ROAST

Rub pot roast with salt and pepper and brush with a cut clove of garlic. Brown roast in hot fat or suet (butter may be used) then add an onion finely chopped (¼ to ½ cup). Then combine the following ingredients, heat to the boiling point and pour over pot-roast:

2 cups tomatoes
1 cup water
¼ cup chopped green pepper
½ cup chopped carrots
¼ cup minced parsley
¼ cup chopped celery

Simmer the meat in a heavy covered iron pot for about 2 hours. Remove the roast from the pot. Strain vegetables from the pot liquor, if desired or leave in for sauce. Make a roux of 3 tablespoon flour and 3 tablespoon melted butter, then add ½ teaspoon sugar and 1½ teaspoons vinegar or lemon juice and add pot liquor. It may be necessary to add a bit more flour to make a thick gravy. Cook until it bubbles and taste for seasoning. More salt, sugar or vinegar may be needed. Just before serving, thin gravy with ¼ cup cream.

How a Boy May Turn Affection Into Love

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"There is an old song that says "You never miss the water till the well goes dry."

And that song is filled with meaning when you apply it to love. For too often we poor mortals never realize our blessings until they've taken flight.

A typical case is the one presented to us today by the Dorchester young man who writes:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

As a rule I am not one of those who write to someone for advice, but here I am, asking you to settle a most tender situation. I like your answers to questions, and hope you can help me.

I've been going "steady" with a young lady for about two years. I love her more than anyone in this world, but don't believe she cares very much for me.

I could take out other girls, but I'm afraid she'd find it out and give me the "gate."

She is also very independent, and cares nothing about what I say. How can I turn her liking into love. L. E. D.

MY DEAR SON:

Perhaps this girl is too dead sure of you, and you'd stand higher in her estimation if you took out another girl once in a while, and let your girl know it.

It's bad for people to have too great a sense of power; it's also not agreeable to lose a POSSESSION.

Don't begin hitting wildly with that old reliable club—jealousy. But gently show the young lady that if she's not available for the movies, theater or dinner—there are others."

And then see that the substitute is a swell looker.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Choose Diet Wisely

By Ida Jean Kain

DON'T HITCH your diet to a star's . . . many of the diets originating in Hollywood are dangerous. This is due to the fact that during their well-earned rest between pictures, the stars invariably put on weight, and then, just before the next picture, they diet strenuously to take off this excess poundage.

In their haste to get slim, they take out of the menus the very things that give backbone to a reducing program.

For example, the current plan is to eat uncooked vegetables and never to touch meat, milk or eggs. Very few of the actresses eat potatoes, bread, butter or desserts. One thing is right—they should not take desserts on a diet! But let's see what happens to a diet deficient in any of the protective foods.

Protein is essential in any reducing menu. In fact, from 70 to 100 grams or from 280 to 400 calories in protein should be given daily on a reducing diet. How can you possibly get your share of protein on a diet of uncooked vegetables?

If the stars only knew it, those taboo items of lean meat, milk and eggs speed their reducing. A high protein diet actually enables the body to use more calories, for it is a scientific fact that protein speeds up tissue metabolism.

In addition to their effect on metabolism, meat and eggs have a high satiety value. Skim milk or buttermilk supply protein and add the necessary calcium and phosphorus to the reducing menus.

And what happens when bread, butter and potatoes are left out of the menus? Potatoes supply mineral salts and the most food for 100 calories that you can find on any list. And, I ask you, is there anything that tastes better than a hot, mealy, baked potato?

Personal opinion is to the contrary; you need some bread and butter in a reducing menu. Three slices of whole grain bread and one and one-half pats of butter are a necessity if the daily diet is to be balanced.

Not all the Hollywood diets are in a class with the new vegetable menus—just the ones that attract attention. While we hear most about freak eating plans, many of the actresses follow sensible, balanced menus. Beverly Roberts lost 15 pounds of weight and three inches off the hipline without sacrificing an ounce of her superb vitality. She followed a 1200 calorie menu and exercises every day.

* * *

In reducing, apply the rule that while the food you do not eat makes you slim, it is the food you do eat that keeps you healthy and, if anything, the latter is the more important. It would pay any beauty to remember that the daily menus should provide 500 calories in the protective foods—fruits, vegetables, eggs, milk and lean meat.

You can slim down beautifully and healthfully by following the reducing menus given daily in the column. Send for the "Calorie Chart" and use it as a guide in weighing the menus to suit yourself. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope in writing for the chart.

DRAKE ADMITS HIS IDENTITY

CHAPTER 821

"ALLEN DRAKE!"

As the identifying name fell jocundly from Harry Underwood's lips, Dicky, Lillian and I echoed it with amazement mingled with the amusement which the contrast between the image of him we remembered and his present impersonation of my father afforded.

Allen Drake! Brilliant ace of the federal operatives under my father in the old days, still high in the service, and always delegated to aid my father whenever the "old fox" emerged from his retirement.

Was it really Allen Drake who stood steadily staring at Harry Underwood after his identifying challenge?

The lines of mirth had vanished from his mouth now, and it was with a new seriousness that he spoke to Harry.

"Is this wise in front of—"

His eyes went swiftly to Katie, who had dropped a large spoon with a loud clatter and was gazing open-mouthed in our direction.

"Perfectly wise and safe," Harry Underwood rejoined. "We decided upon that before this impersonation was staged. She and Jim have to know whatever secrets there are, and their loyalty is unshakable."

"What about their discretion?" my pseudo uncle queried, and Harry Underwood was prompt in reply.

"That we're guarding with machine guns and knouts," he said, and the other was relaxed palpably.

"Nobody else coming in?" he said, and I realized that his voice was no longer a careful simulation of my father's, but was now sounding the well-remembered tones of the brilliant secret agent.

"Nary a soul," Mr. Underwood replied, and with a quick movement, my supposed uncle put up his hand and snatched the disguising opaque glasses from his eyes.

"Well! Niece Margaret!" He gave me his old familiar smile. "You were a doubting Thomasina from the first, weren't you? I must beg your pardon for ragging you in the way I did, but you were altogether too stand-offish with your aged relative. You didn't give him the proper respect or affection. It grieved me."

He had changed very little with the years. I decided as he stood smiling lazily down at me as if there were no one else in the room save himself and me. Tall—the same height as my father, their physical resemblance had done them yeoman service before now—he had an air of languid elegance about him that made people not in his secret put him down as a dilettante.

"You were too good to be true," I said, just as Dicky struck in abruptly.

"Just what is the big idea behind this, Drake, anyway?" he asked.

ANNOUNCEMENT

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am going to announce my engagement. Should I send cards through the mail, or just announce it in the newspaper? A group of my friends are to give me a party soon, on a Sunday afternoon.

Could I, at this time, in some way, announce my engagement?

RUTH.

Formal engagement announcement cards are not in good form . . . don't send them. The way you should announce your engagement is by telling your relatives and close friends, and by writing to those relatives and intimate friends who live too far away to be told by word of mouth.

Your fiance tells his relatives and friends at the same time and in the same way. In these notes the relatives and friends are told of the date on which the announcement is to be made and are asked not to mention the news before this date.

Then, in the newspaper of that date, your parents may publish a formal notice of the engagement.

If your parents wish, they may give a party of some kind, formal or informal, to make this important announcement. It is not, however, at all necessary for them to give a party.

But neither would it be good form for you to make this announcement at the kind of party you mention.

CHAPTER 28

IT was a chastened, sobered Whit Prentiss whom Patsy and Spike half-led, half-carried back to the warmth of the living room.

They wrapped him in blankets, installed him on a deep lounge in front of the blazing fire.

"Don't go away, Patsy!" he said. "Let me hang on to your hand. What happened anyway? I remember hitting the water, and then the lights went out."

"Nothing much," said Patsy. "You just did a new kind of dive. You went down to the bottom and stayed there."

"And you got me out?"

"Well, somebody had to." Patsy giggled. "How does your head feel? I gave your hair an awful yank."

Whit stroked her hand.

"You're quite a girl, Patsy," he said. "You know, a fellow doesn't have his life saved every day by a girl like you. I'm a whole lot obliged."

"You ought to be," said Spike. "You'd have been there yet. How about a drink?"

"Not just now," said Whit. "I'm all right. I just mixed too much water with my drinks. I've got a trick heart that don't stand for that kind of foolishness. But I'll be all right. Turn on some music, Spike. I don't want to kill the party."

• • •

BUT somehow, the party was killed anyhow. The shadow of tragedy had touched it too closely.

Patsy became aware it was getting dark. They'd be wondering about her at home.

Whit's eyes opened as she freed her hand.

"Getting restless?"

"No . . . But I have to put on some clothes."

"Why? You look grand in that bathing suit. And you can't tell—I might have to be rescued again."

"Then you'd better wait till I get back," said Patsy, rising, stretching her arms luxuriously in the warm glow of the fire.

"No," said Whit. "I can't take any chances. Give me a hand." He put one foot tentatively on the floor, stood up. "I could probably go in and drown all over again."

Whit paused at the door of the upstairs dressing room, taking in her youthful, curving form—the reflections of it in the tall, triple mirrors. He saw it was perfect from any angle.

"You must be cold after sitting around in that wet suit," he said. "You'd better change in here." And he opened a door leading to a bedroom, chastely tan and blue, warmly inviting. "Yonder's the bath. Nothing like lots of good, hot water when you're cold."

"Oh!" said Patsy. "That's a grand idea." She grabbed up her things.

Whit still lingered.

"I could scare up a maid," he said, "to hand you towels and things."

"Goodness no," said Patsy. "I'll be all right. I've taken lots of baths by myself. But you could throw me that slipper."

Whit picked it up and gave it to her instead. . . Then, all at once, Patsy scarcely knew how, his arms were around her, and she was clinging to him, the slipper forgotten.

"Oh, dear," she said, breathless and happy, "this is so nice . . . Isn't it?"

Whit kissed her again.

"Lovely! I'm going to always call you that, Patsy. Just plain Lovely."

"I like it," said Patsy, judicially. "It sounds swell. Say it again."

"Lovely," said Whit. "Listen. I'm getting an idea. A big idea. It's been coming on me ever since you dragged me out of the water. Why don't you and I do something about this? The way we feel, I mean?"

"I don't know," said Patsy. "What?"

"Well," said Whit, "we could get married. That seems to be what people usually do about it."

"Could we?"

"I don't know what's to stop us."

Patsy put her hands on his shoulders, looked into his eyes, suddenly solemn—or as solemn as Patsy could be.

"I can think of some things. But I don't care—if you don't."

"Not a snap."

"Then," said Patsy, all smiles again, "let's . . . Mister Lovely."

• • •

WHIT experienced a sensation of dismayed bliss as, leaving Patsy to revel in jade tile and caressing soap bubbles, he made his way to his own room and shower.

Inside of a little more than an hour, he'd died, drowned, been rescued, proposed, and been accepted. It was too much. It called for a drink.

But when the expressionless servant answered his ring, he changed his mind.

"Is there a maid about?" he said. "Send her to the east guest room, and tell her to look after Miss Kelly. Do you understand? She is to see Miss Kelly is entirely comfortable and has anything she wants. If it happens to be the moon, don't quibble. Give her the stars, too."

"Yes, sir."

Whit shut the door, tossed his beach-robe into a chair, stretched, flexed his muscles, drew a deep breath.

"Lovely!" he said. "Boy, is she lovely!" He socked a pillow . . . And that was how it had hit him—smack! . . . When he came to beside the pool with her leaning over him . . . Patsy! . . . Why, he was nuts about her! . . . Had been for weeks . . . And he might have died without ever telling her . . . Without ever knowing what it would be like to have her around all the time . . . dancing, laughing, kidding . . . It took things like that to teach a fellow sense . . . Life with Patsy . . . That would be something . . . something gay, youthful . . . lovely."

Only one thing troubled him. He wished Brad Talton were around. He wanted a pal to tell it to.

• • •

PATSY also had only a misgiving. Whether she'd tell Sheila.

She wondered about it all the way back to Boston—or at least whenever she stopped thinking how nice it was Whit was alive beside her, instead of lying down at the bottom of that pool. So much alive, in fact, that he accomplished the semi-miraculous feat of driving all the way with one arm, with only occasional bored glances at traffic lights.

Finally, she decided she would, if Sheila would promise not to tell. Because she knew there would be difficulties, and she wasn't thinking of Whit's family. Her own parents would furnish enough opposition. And there was her age! Not to mention Whit's. There were a lot of things, she knew, Whit hadn't thought of.

Among them, right at the moment, was the problem of accounting for her afternoon and evening. She mentioned it to Whit.

"That's easy," he said. "Say you were with me."

It took some time for Patsy to convince him that wouldn't do.

"Well, then," he suggested, "say you were with Jane and me. All your people know Jane . . . Wait a minute. I've got it . . . I happen to know she's at the Plymouth Theater tonight . . . And she always comes out to smoke between acts . . . Suppose we drop by . . . Then you can truthfully say you were with her . . . And—if it comes to a showdown she can say so, too."

Somehow, Patsy didn't wholly approve. But she didn't want to be forbidden to see Whit again, and she hadn't really done anything wrong . . . it was just a case of being diplomatic.

Jane, as Whit predicted, proved highly co-operative. It wasn't the first time she'd alibied for her cousin—nor he for her.

"Of course," she said. "Patsy's been with me all evening. And—how much later?"

"No later," said Whit, with a frown that surprised her . . . Then in an undertone: "And don't make any rash guesses this time."

• • •

THEY stopped briefly again before telling each other good night—on Columbia road, where a big-limbed tree cast a convenient shadow.

"We don't want to fool around about this," said Whit. "Tonight would do for me."

But there was a limit to Patsy's daring.

"I couldn't," she said. "My folks would be wild. And—it wouldn't be right."

"Why?"

"Well," said Patsy, "you have to wait three days. And there's something about our ages. And . . . it just wouldn't be right anyway—because we . . . wouldn't be really getting—married."

Though he didn't pay much heed to the rest, Whit recognized the force of the three-day argument. Now he thought of it, you did have to wait that long in Massachusetts. But New Hampshire—

Patsy shook her head.

"I couldn't," she said. "It wouldn't be right anyhow."

He gave up.

"Anyhow," he said, "I'll see you tomorrow. And we'll get it all straightened out then—Lovely."

They parted on that. Well, maybe not quite on that.

• • •

PATSY had intended to tell Sheila as soon as they were alone.

But Sheila wasn't home yet, and when she arrived, she was bursting with news of her own.

Most of it about Jerry.

He'd shown her through the quarters of the City Council—the old council chamber at City Hall and the temporary meeting place at Faneuil Hall.

He'd introduced her to some of the councilmen, among them Councilmen William A. Carey, John Dowd, William Galvin, Peter Murray and Clement Martin.

Then they'd had dinner at the Boston Oyster House, picked up [illegible] and little Timmy at the Kenmore, gone for a long drive to see the holiday lights.

And, enough, [illegible] Vince was in [illegible] again! He'd called Jerry at his office. It was a message . . . something about money. And Jerry had advised Del not to give him any. But [illegible], she wasn't [illegible].

[illegible] the most exciting news of all [illegible] she waited to impart it until they were both in bed.

"Look," she said, handing Patsy a newspaper.

Patsy read:

HARVARD SCION IN PLANE CRASH

SAN ANTONIO, Texas—Bradford Cabot Talton of Boston and Harvard suffered minor injuries here today in a plane crash. He was stunting above Stinson field when his plane went into a spin . . . he—

• • •

So Brad Talton is found! But it looks as if he'd be shy a roommate—provided Whit goes through with his marriage plans. More intensely interesting developments are contained in tomorrow's chapter of this all-Boston serial novel, appearing daily in all editions of the Boston Evening American.

Doggy Follies Staged; Sheila Leads Champ

Miss Ruth Weidman, the Sheila Kelly of the Boston Evening American's cast of "When a Cabot Loves a Kelly," received a wonderful ovation at the premier showing of costumed dogs at the Dogs of All Nations Revue.

Doggy is the word for it.

Meaning the brilliant and novel canine follies staged at the Hotel Statler yesterday.

Something betwixt a costume party, a style show and dog competition would give an approximate description of the affair.

Definitely international in scope the event featured dogs of all nations. And only the top flight of each country's caninity, at that.

Exhibitors were drawn from Boston's best and well known. Miss Ruth Weidman, that charming heroine of "When a Cabot Loves a Kelly," Boston Evening American serial story, served in exhibitor capacity, leading a championship Boston terrier, Purinton's Dictator.

The master of ceremonying was done by Edward Plara.

Dog models ran the gamut from the sophisticated Pekingese to a Huckleberry Finn Airedale, from a Gargantuan St. Bernard to the minute Chihuahua.

The intelligentsia was represented by the "Thin Man's" favorite companion, the fox terrier who, according to announcements, was the possessor of two college degrees, C. D. and C. D. X.—Companion Dog and Companion Dog Excellent.

The title "Queen of Dogdom" was voted to the Pekingese exhibited by Miss Hilda Yee.

Fate Picks Three More

More readers of the Boston American have shared in "magic circle" dividends in connection with the serial "When a Cabot Loves a Kelly."

Finding their photographs circled on the Cabot-Kelly picture page, three persons visited the American office to receive awards for the use of their likenesses as members of the unofficial cast of the story.

Bettina Pierce, 785 Washington street, Brookline, received a certificate entitling her to a pair of shoes at Wilbar's Shoe Store on Tremont street.

Irma Bluestein, 8 Arlington road, Chestnut Hill, and Mrs. Philip O'Brien, 193 Brookview road, Medford, were awarded $5 cash gifts.

What Has Gone Before

Lovely Sheila Kelly and her family are typical of the best in Boston. So is Atty. Jerry O'Donovan of Roxbury, young B. C. graduate and political leader who loves her. As is Bradford Cabot Talton of Harvard, boxing team letter man, Social Registerite, who also loves her.

All's peaceful in the Kelly family until Sheila, attempting to save her 16-year-old sister Patsy from the consequences of a pickup date, meets Talton, and fascinates him.

Brad's arrest for drunken driving while she is a passenger in his car, however, makes it necessary for her to see him again. And when Jerry gallantly offers to defend him she finds her love for the young lawyer reviving.

Patsy is frankly interested in Brad's roommate, Whit Prentiss, and Jane Prentiss, the latter's debutante cousin, is intrigued by Mickey, Sheila's brother, even though Mickey, interested only in becoming a welterweight champion, gives her little encouragement. Mickey's ring ambitions are opposed by his father, former Police Sergeant Bernard F. Kelly.

A sinister element enters the affairs of the Kelly family when Big Gus Mornick, king of the Boston rackets, tries to obtain possession of a secret police report on racketeering Sheila has typed in the course of her work at the State House, where she is temporarily employed as a stenographer.

Sheila escapes a perilous encounter with the racket king in his South End stronghold.

Sheila, searching through old tax records, finds that Vince Barton, a brother-in-law who is temporarily estranged from Delphine, Sheila's older sister, may be heir to valuable Boston real estate.

Brad, through the efforts of Sheila and Jerry, escapes with a fine from his auto law violation predicament. But when Sheila calls his rooms to return a valuable bracelet he has sent her as a farewell present, Whit tells her Brad has vanished.

Meanwhile, Boston's underworld has been terrorized by another rackets murder, perpetrated by Greefy Koopman, right hand torpedo of Big Gus.

Vince Barton returns to Boston just in time to witness the killing. Greefy, freed by the police for lack of evidence, recognizes Barton on the street, knows he is identified, and flees.

En route to Montreal, Brad is robbed by Greefy who has escaped on the same train. Stranded, Brad casts his lot with a barnstorming aviator.

Jerry discovers Barton's inheritance is worth $200,000. After broadcasting an attack on Big Gus, he goes with Sheila and Patsy to El Morocco, where Vince is making his Boston crooning debut. They inspect the inherited property at Kenmore square, and draw up an agreement in the Kenmore Hotel, securing half of the legacy for Del.

Jerry is elected City Councillor. Mornick, to silence his attack, plans to frame Mickey and thus reach O'Donovan through Sheila. He instructs Greefy Koopman to pin a murder charge on the youth, first obtaining a fresh body. Greefy decides on Vince.

Patsy, meanwhile, visits Whit's Beverly estate with Whit and another young couple. She saves Whit from drowning in his indoor swimming pool.

The Story All Boston Is Talking About

Here's 1st Scene In Del Rio Test

Initial Contest Picture Shown Today; Chance to Win Cash

Forty dollars in cash is yours if your memory is good!

Above is the first of a series of three "stills" taken from past Dolores Del Rio pictures which are to be identified in the Boston Evening American contest.

For those who follow the movies, the contest should prove surprisingly simple, inasmuch as the only requirement is the guessing of the title of the film from which the scenes were taken.

The above was taken from one of Miss Del Rio's most successful films, and should be easily recognized. After naming the above picture, be sure to save your answer until the remaining two scenes appear in the American. Then send all three with your name and address to the Dolores Del Rio Contest Editor, Boston American, 5 Winthrop Sq., Boston.

The contest is being held in conjunction with the showing of "International Settlement," co-starring Dolores Del Rio and George Sanders, at the RKO Boston theater. These two favorites proved a veritable sensation in their last picture, "Lancer Spy," and in their new picture provide a series of thrilling romantic adventures in the war-torn districts of China.

Prizes in the contest are as follows: First, $15; second $10; third $5; fourth and fifth, $2.50, and five prizes of $1 each. The following twenty-five winners will each receive courtesy passes good for two admissions to the RKO Boston theater.

DERBY, Vt., Feb. 3 (AP)—[illegible] a possible [illegible] Farmer William H. Ryan [illegible] that [illegible] be having radio-conditioned milk on our breakfast [illegible].

He reported he installed a radio in his barn to see what effect music would have on the cows. Production, he said, appeared to increase although the test had not been going on long enough to make a definite statement.

His herdsman, Roy Fournier, was more enthusiastic, however. He said production increased one to two pounds per cow after they had listened to musical programs.

A public meeting to protest Mayor Tobin's proposed abandonment of the Haymarket Relief Hospital will be held at the Clarence R. Edwards school on Walker street, in Charlestown, tonight.

Fight New Taxes On Chain Stores

C. F. Adams, First National Treasurer, Leads Battle on Three Bills

Opposition to three bills which would impose annual special taxes of from $10 to $550 on chain stores was expressed today by labor, agriculture and retail store representatives before the joint legislative Committee on Taxation.

Speakers [illegible] that the proposed tax would [illegible] markets for [illegible] farm products. Others [illegible] that unemployment would be [illegible] added [illegible] which now [illegible] more than $37,000,000 a year in wages.

It was declared also that added taxes would tend to increase the general cost of living.

[illegible] witnesses were called before the committee by Charles F. Adams, treasurer of First National Stores, who conducted the fight against the tax.

Two of the bills would impose a tax [illegible] each additional store in a chain. The [illegible] would provide a [illegible] tax, beginning at $10 for each store in a chain of fewer than 10 stores and running up to a maximum of $550 for each store [illegible].

MARLBORO MAN SPEAKS

[illegible] president of the Massachusetts Fruit Growers Association said the passage of any of the bills would "seriously injure agriculture in Massachusetts."

He said that [illegible] boxes of apples are grown in this state [illegible] and that the growers could not dispose of this vast amount of fruit to their advantage through the chain store outlets.

"The chain stores pay us a fair price," he avers.

Harry P. Grages, an official of Boston Central Labor Union, said that the members of his organization [illegible] Boston, are opposed to such taxes as they would result in reduced employment.

"The chain stores are paying decent wages and we are organizing their employes," he added.

[illegible] opposed by John [illegible] Wareham, in behalf of the Cranberry Cooperative Association of Massachusetts, whose members produce 50 per cent of the cranberries raised in this state; George Tinkham of Dighton, who represented the market gardeners of that section; P. J. Gues, business agent of the New England Meat Cutters Association, representing 13,000 members.

Thomas H. Canning of the Knights of Labor and Dennis A. Dalton of Fall River, representing [illegible] independent grocers of that city, also spoke in opposition as did Charles H. Phillips, representing 20 independent chain store operators of Fall River, and Mrs. [illegible] who represented 1200 retail store employes in Boston.

The Consumers League of Massachusetts and Boston Chamber of Commerce Retail Trade Board wrote the committee they opposed the bills.

The First National Stores treasurer filed a brief with the committee in which reasons for opposition were stated.

[illegible] the brief stated that First National Stores has 12,500 employes with an annual payroll of $15,500,000 and that 8500 of its employes are in Massachusetts. The payroll has been increased at the annual rate of $1,300,000 since last year.

CITES PRESENT TAXES

The brief further stated that First National's direct taxes to the state and to cities and towns of Massachusetts annually amount to $488,000, the present burden being $791 for each store it operates in this state.

In addition the brief says that the [illegible] taxes paid by Massachusetts chain stores to this state amount to $4,200,000.

The Adams brief reviewed the changes in conditions in manufacturing, farm marketing and transportation and declared that increased facilities for production had forced improved systems of distribution, such as chain stores.

He said Massachusetts industries such as textiles, shoes and others were using chain stores as an economical market for their products. Adams asserted that the resulting reduction in cost of living aided manufacturers and enabled them to employ thousands of workers. He said each year the chain stores also were handling an increasing amount of locally grown products.

Merchants Oppose Bills On Instalment Buying

Representatives of merchants selling on the instalment plan appeared before the legislative committee on legal affairs today to oppose eight bills sponsored by Wheeler C. Marshall which would enforce stricter regulations.

In a letter to the committee, Marshall said he was unable to appear today to argue for his bills. He will be given an opportunity to appear later.

Alonzo E. York, counsel for Home Furnishers Association of New England, told the committee 75 per cent of the furniture sold in Massachusetts is sold on conditional sales.

CALLED NUISANCE BILLS

The principle change sought by the bills is to prohibit a company from declaring the whole amount due when there is a default in the payment of an instalment. York said that such a provision is unconstitutional.

Frank Houlihan of the M[illegible] Company of Cambridge, president of the association, said he didn't know why the furniture business should be the target for regulatory legislation.

"With increasing taxes many furniture houses are finding it difficult to make both ends meet," he added. "These bills are nuisance bills and I think the Legislature would do well to stop harassing us under such conditions."

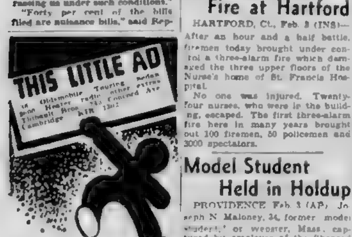

"Forty per cent of the bills filed are nuisance bills," said Representative William E. Ramsdell of Winchester, House chairman of the committee. "This year the furniture business seems to be the target."

URGES INVESTIGATION

Daniel M. Bloomfield, secretary of the Retail Trade Board of Boston Chamber of Commerce, opposed the bills but favored a resolve to appoint a special commission to investigate the subject, which was filed by Marshall. Bloomfield said that the matter would then be settled for all time and that such a commission could draw up a uniform conditional sales contract.

In addition, Bloomfield said the Marshall bills were filed because of complaints against one business concern but he declined to name the concern.

Others who opposed the bills included Nathan S. Scully, Fred [illegible] representing the Lynn Retail Credit Bureau; Max Wise of Kane Furniture Company, Mrs. Holmes of C. E. Osgood Company, Edward Adaskin of Springfield and Fall River and Representative John R. Mitchell of Fall River.

Identify Suspects in Police Lineup

Mrs. Fanny Rachin of Yeoman street, Roxbury, identified two men who robbed her store and beat her on January 28. She picked the men from the Boston police lineup today.

Boston Evening American Photo

John Pilihosian not only identified a negro he said was his assailant in his Roxbury store, but as he looked over the police lineup he lurched at the man. Police had to use force to quiet Pilihosian.

[illegible] ing the armed robber with milk bottles and then [illegible] the store with a knife.

The lineup which was shifted from the usual platform to an adjoining room because of the large number of prisoners appearing also resulted in the identification of two other hold-up men, who confessed to robbing and beating a Roxbury woman last week, police said.

The men were identified by Mrs. Fanny Rachin of Yeoman street, Roxbury, as the pair who attacked her on Jan. 28.

Police said that 10 minutes before appearing in the lineup, one of the men had made a routine appearance before a probation officer. He is under two year probation from the Concord Reformatory.

75 ARRESTS MADE

Although they said they were satisfied at the first night's haul which resulted in more than 75 arrests, authorities declared they believed Boston gangland "big shots" had fled when the drive opened.

Known hangouts of criminals and thieves throughout the city were less crowded during the night, police stated. Such places emptied quickly when news of the police action reached the underworld.

With more than 1500 officers patroling the streets before midnight, Boston probably became the best policed city in the country. No handbag snatches were reported and there was but one report of a small break in a variety store.

This vigilance will continue until Commissioner Timilty is satisfied that the recent increase in petty thievery and hold-ups has halted.

Noteworthy of the drive were the reports from Back Bay and Fields Corner stations that no suspects were loitering on the streets in those divisions all night.

Officers of the Special Service Squad, who have been active in this type of work since the squad was [illegible] arrested nine men but released three after examination. Members of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation, also sent out for street duty, arrested two men, one being sent to Lowell, where he is wanted by police.

Two robberies were reported but both took place before the special detail had swung into action. Two Negroes robbed Nathan Schlesinger of $15 in his Humboldt avenue grocery store, and earlier Mrs. Ida Goldstein, mother of five children, was beaten and robbed of $42.30 in her American Legion highway, Dorchester, home.

Marooned Man Rescued After 7 Hours on Rock

priest could pronounce the last rites of the church for Giblin against the roar of the raging falls.

[illegible] Giblin had clung to the rock in the midst of swirling waters. Before that he had been swept over the swift running Pawtucket dam—a plunge that would ordinarily end in death.

READY TO RETURN

So critical was Giblin's condition as he was brought to safety that his questions and answers were unintelligible. Even then his identification was not known.

With the exception of his brother, Raymond who lingered behind, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Giblin, his brother, Warren, 28, and sister Helen, 24, were seated in their car prepared to drive home.

They waited for Raymond and when he approached slowly, the father, who is conductor of the Lowell high school band, asked:

"Any idea who it is?"

"It's Ted," came the reply.

The family then sped to the hospital in the trail of an ambulance which had been waiting at the shore.

SOUGHT SHORT CUT

After physicians later reported that Giblin was responding favorably to treatment and would recover, the father related his son's story as told to him at the bedside.

"I went for a walk up Pawtucket boulevard. On my way back I saw some people skating on the river so I walked out on the ice to take a short cut home.

"I stepped on some snow and the ice gave way underneath me. All at once I was swept over the falls. I was wet all over and, a funny thing, I lost my hat and I wanted to get it.

"The next thing I knew I was in the cleft of a rock below the dam and a man began shouting from the shore. Soon several men began running and shouting for me to raise my right arm and then my left.

"Then I got past being cold and I couldn't lift my arms. The next thing I knew a fellow came out on a breeches buoy and put me over something that looked like an automobile tire.

"FEELING GOOD NOW"

"He fed me whiskey and then I went out—all except hearing a lot of policemen saying: 'You'll be all right, you'll be all right.'"

The father said a nurse asked his son:

"Did you know how long you were on the rock?"

"About three and a half hours," was the reply.

"But I'm feeling pretty good now," his father quoted his son as adding.

Surfman Harold Manchester of the Newburyport Coast Guard station rode the buoy 75 feet from shore [illegible] it, gave him a stimulant and then fellow Coast Guardsmen hauled them ashore.

The cheers on the river banks were deafening.

Physicians said that Giblin's legs were temporarily paralyzed from the [illegible] he was unable to bend Giblin's legs to get him into the buoy.

Scores of attempts at rescue had failed until a small line that was to be used for the running of a breeches buoy was clutched desperately by the marooned man.

PULLED HALFWAY

So eager was he for rescue after [illegible] keep warm—[illegible] partial collapse from the biting cold—that he paid no heed to shouts that he let go of the line until a stronger one was placed.

Rescuers — firemen, police and coastguardsmen—then attempted to haul him ashore but succeeded [illegible] way—from a point 150 feet from shore to one only 75 feet.

It was at this latter spot that Surfman Manchester effected the rescue.

At times during the night Giblin appeared to have given up hope as he slipped from his jagged perch and disappeared from the view of the rescuers and onlookers.

But he appeared again [illegible] waving an arm to show his rescuers he was still conscious.

KNEELS IN PRAYER

Through the medium of automobile headlights and powerful floodlights, the victim could be seen making the sign of the cross and kneeling in an attitude of prayer on the small and slippery rock.

Hope for his rescue went up once out of a score of tries when [illegible] lines designed to haul across the rock the more sturdy cable of a breeches buoy became entangled.

Shortly after that failure, the marooned man was seen to slide toward the water in an apparent gesture of despair but shouts from the shore and the Pawtucket bridge encouraged him to crawl back and take a sitting position.

The coast guard detail, in command of Boatswain's Mate Frank E. Holbrook, was rushed over the road from Newburyport, with shrieking police sirens blasting a right of way.

In the crew was Leo Faulkingham, boatswain first class, veteran of the thrilling recovery of a man's body near the same spot a year ago.

In the same crew were John Faulkingham, brother of Leo; Manchester, Lawrence Woods and David K. Bascnett, all seamen.

Ernest Ouelette, 21-year-old mill worker, was first to discover the plight of the river-bound man as he wended his way homeward from a night shift at one of the nearby mills.

24 Nurses Escape Fire at Hartford

HARTFORD, Ct., Feb. 3 (INS)—After an hour and a half battle, firemen today brought under control a three-alarm fire which damaged the three upper floors of the Nurse's home of St. Francis Hospital.

No one was injured. Twenty-four nurses, who were in the building, escaped. The first three-alarm fire here in many years brought out 100 firemen, 50 policemen and 3000 spectators.

Model Student Held in Holdup

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 3 (AP).—Joseph N. Maloney, 34, former model student of Webster, Mass., captured by employes of the Shepard department store here yesterday after a holdup, stood glumly in district court today while counsel entered not guilty pleas to armed robbery and carrying a concealed weapon. Judge Robinson held him without bail on the armed robbery charge.

Film World Premiere In Old Mining Hamlet

Special to Boston Evening American

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 3—"Gold is Where You Find It," Cosmopolitan-Warner Brothers Technicolor film, was largely produced in Trinity County near Weaverville, and on Saturday night Weaverville will see the world premiere of this picture.

Telling the story of conflict between hydraulic miners and farmers and horticulturists of the state in the early '70s, the picture stars George Brent and Olivia DeHavilland, with John Litel and Margaret Lindsey in featured roles.

Other players prominently cast are Jane Bryan, Mary McGuire, Wayne Morris, Hugh Herbert and other Hollywood notables, and all these actors will, it is expected, be present at the preview.

Two big transport planes will leave here early Saturday morning to carry screen celebrities, radio broadcasters, news announcers, syndicate and magazine writers and reporters from Hollywood and San Francisco.

Radio technicians have gone ahead to make necessary arrangements for connecting Weaverville with the National Airways at Redding, that the National Broadcasts may go all over the country, and technicians are busily installing equipment in the big social auditorium of Weaverville, that reproduction of dialogue and sound effects may be perfect.

Instead of long lists of stars of the film world, the lobby interviews will be held with men and women of the old gold town. Historic figures will be questioned as to the impression the film made on them, and younger folk, too, to whom tales of the bitter feuds of hydraulic gold miners and the horticulturists of earlier days are legendary.

Hollywood and the countrywide radio listeners will await with interest the broadcasts preceding showing of this notable film.

The film cavalcade will find a place of frontier aspect which still justifies its description as "part of the old prospector's California." Even the matter of overnight accommodations shows little change.

Ice Workers Cut Up Wreck of Bridge

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Feb. 3 (AP) — Workmen ventured out on the crumbling Niagara River ice jam today to cut up the fallen "Honeymoon Bridge" and sink it before the ice carries it in a destructive sweep toward Lake Ontario. Fear has been expressed that ice-borne wreckage might damage power plants.

South End Lodger Ends Life With Gun

A man believed to be Edward Smith, about 28 years old, who registered last night at a Worcester square, South End, lodging house committed suicide in his room today according to police.

Mrs. Agnes Burns, the landlady found Smith lying on a spring which had been removed from the bed. A revolver was in his hand.

GIRL About TOWN

—By MARJORIE McBRIDE—

At one time or other, every man who finds his hair getting a little thin on top has spoken resentfully of the way women get all the breaks. There's no such thing as a bald-headed woman.

Marjorie McBride

That's what he thinks, according to Miss Mary G. Slattery, a wig maker in Boston for 20 years.

Plenty of women are partially bald, she says, but you would never suspect it to meet them on the street. When a man's head begins to bear a general resemblance to a billiard ball, he makes one of two futile gestures and then gives up and tries to grin when friends comment.

A woman fights baldness with quiet desperation, and nature favors her, because it is easier to make a wig for a woman than a man. Again, if she is losing hair in spots, she can twist and curl her hair so that a very little can cover a lot of territory.

Among themselves, women seldom admit to a wig. They speak of toupees, switches and transformations. Wigs are neither weird nor comical if they are well made, but the confession that she needs one is one of the toughest decisions a lady has to make. THIS Is LIFE

—By ROBERT E. ROGERS—

The other day Professor Samuel M. Waxman of the Department of Romance Languages of Boston University brought me a little book which he has selected and edited which should be of interest to anyone who has a taste for daily journalism in the Boston tradition, [illegible] written and full of wisdom.

Robert E. Rogers

It is called "Nomads and Listeners of Joseph Edgar Chamberlain," privately printed at the Riverside Press, Cambridge. Amateurs of the Boston style in letters will remember the work of these writers so recently dead, H. P. Parker, one of the best known dramatic critics in America, and the more versatile Philip Hale, equally learned in music and the drama.

Now Joseph Edgar Chamberlain, who for many years wrote the "Listener" and the "Nomad" on the Transcript, was of like inheritance. He combined a love of nature with an exact and wide knowledge of letters.

His span of life and journalistic interests ran from 1855 to 1935, embracing the Civil War which he remembered as a boy, the Spanish War in which he served as a correspondent in Cuba, and the World War in which he lost [illegible]

Chief Essay Tells College Heartbreak

He was a Vermonter [illegible] as a young boy he accompanied his parents to the pioneer lands of Wisconsin. In fact, the chief essay in the Professor Waxman's volume is an unpublished fragment of autobiography in which Mr. Chamberlain described his boyhood days, the outbreak of the Civil War, and, perhaps most poignant, his account of his disappointment at not being able to attend Beloit College.

"It meant that the boy must replace college courses with studies of his own, and no doubt the banishment intensified the effort to make the replacement effective. And circumstances began to help on the effort.

"The beloved next brother had become a working newspaper man, attaining a rapid success in his employment. But when a boy passionately desires an education unquestionably he obtains it in some sort, college or no college. In default of Beloit this boy was forced to the college of Franklin and of Greeley, of Dickens and of Howells."

Gained Fine Education Through Own Efforts

The result was that he became a self-educated and undoubtedly well-educated newspaper man, as Professor Waxman tells the story in his preface. City editor of the Milwaukee Daily Sentinel, music and drama editor of the Chicago Evening Post; later a pioneer columnist on the Advertiser and the Record of Boston and, even [illegible] the Transcript.

Appropriately the little book is made up mostly of his columns except for the Waxman preface and appreciation and the unpublished essay of which I have spoken. Excerpts from the "Listener" and the "Nomad" show the breadth and versatility of his interests.

One of the loveliest of the sections is that entitled "The Foreign Scene," pastels in prose from France and Spain, mingling pictorial descriptions, literary and artistic notes and historical comment about French cathedrals, the Pyrenees, and Toledo. Perhaps no less lovely and interesting, though less familiar than "The New England Scene," of Boston and Concord and the White Mountains.

Essay on Cats Ranks With Best in Line

Of his literary criticism the essay on Whitman contains much that is new and first hand. He did not like the new poets, but his ability at character sketches is shown definitely in his prose about the late Charles William Eliot, about Helen Keller and Theodore Roosevelt.

People like Joseph Edgar Chamberlain create a good deal of a city's atmosphere, yet are too soon forgotten when they are gone. To retrieve from oblivion, as Professor Waxman has done, even a little of the ephemerida of good newspaper writing is a most worthy effort, a labor of love, and one well worth doing for its own sake.

Highway Job Bill To 3d Reading

A bill requiring that 75 per cent of [illegible] on state highway construction be employed from the district in which the work is done, awaited third reading today after it had been favored at a Senate hearing.

The bill was supported by Senators from districts outside of Boston who contended their districts were discriminated against by the state department of public works. It was vigorously opposed by Boston legislators.

During the hearing the handling of highway jobs as patronage was charged. Senator Joseph A. Langone of Boston urged that Commissioner of Public Works William F. Callahan be called before the Senate to explain where and how he expends his appropriations.

Lomasney Wins Suit Appeal

Joseph P. Lomasney, brother of the late Martin P. Lomasney of the West End, today had won his suit for an additional $12,222.22 as income from his brother's estate for the period from August 12, 1933, when Lomasney died, to January 22, 1936, when the will was probated.

William M. Prendible, clerk of Suffolk superior court, executor, started payments of $5000 a year to Lomasney, from the trust fund created in the will, on January 22, 1936.

The superior probate court had ordered Prendible to pay the earlier period sum to Lomasney. Prendible appealed. Yesterday the Supreme Judicial Court upheld the probate court.

"O-o-o Ho-hum . . . Pardon me, kids, while I yawn . . . I've been up all night going through the sacks of mail . . . Yes siree, man and boy . . . I'm exhausted.

"Say, for evens sakes . . . I had no idea I'd start such a rumpus with all you real kids . . . My goodness, all those hundreds of letters from you real youngsters sure have got me thinking . . . no foolin.

"And to think that a woeful waif . . . a pitiful pooch . . . just a Homeless Mutt . . . poor me . . . should get all that attention after I made my simple appeal for a place to rest my weary head . . . And to have that weary head stroked by the tender hands of some gentle youngster.

"Well sir, everyone of you kids came through with flying colors . . . I've been offered everything to sleep on . . . from a brand new chaise lounge . . . to a clean potato sack behind the kitchen stove.

"So . . . c'mon and sit back with me for a few more hours . . . and let me sort o' figure everything out . . . I told you that I'd be ready to make my decision in Thursday's Boston Evening American . . . and when I did, I had no idea that New England had so many grand youngsters that would give way to their sincere feelings . . . and attempt to ease my sorry life.

"I've tried like the Dickens to be fair with each of you . . . I want you all just as much as you want me . . . But, I'm only one mutt . . . Now, I'm going to ask you to be just as patient with me as you have been thoughtful.

"I'm going to rest my fate with the letter that best expresses to me what I desire . . . And say, I wanna tell you right now that every letter is being read . . . and that's why I'm going to ask you to give me another day . . . Mystery Gas Fells 6 in Lynn

Fumes Overcome Entire Family, 3 Taken to Hospital

Gas fumes [illegible] from a [illegible] felled a Lynn family of six persons early today. Three of the victims were taken in serious condition to Lynn Hospital.

Those in the hospital are Mrs. Alice Julien of Suffolk street and her daughters, Alice, 14, and Gloria, 12.

Also overcome but revived by firemen, were the father, Noel Julien, and two sons, William, 13 and Joseph, 15.

Joseph was awakened by the fumes just before daybreak. He found his sister Alice unconscious on the floor and other members of the family almost completely overcome.

He ran to the street, summoning Sergeant Charles Kervian and Patrolman William Bransfield.

Noted Norse Women Here

Norway's two most outstanding women were in Boston today.

One was Sonja Henie, blonde and doll-like champion skater and movie actress, the other Mme. Kirsten Flagstad, internationally-known Wagnerian soprano of the Metropolitan Opera House.

Madame Flagstad arrived here from Portland, Me., on a concert tour. She is scheduled to give a concert here Sunday, following appearances in Providence, R. I., Springfield and Worcester.

The opera singer paid tribute to Miss Henie's accomplishments and said she had seen her skate in New York.

Ehrmann, secretary of the Massachusetts [illegible] for the Abolition of the Death Penalty, announced today that the [illegible] will demand roll call votes by the Legislature on bills to abolish the death penalty and to give juries discretion of death or life sentences in murder cases.

Albert Morris, Boston University sociology professor, will discuss the bills at a luncheon of the council February 8 at the Twentieth Century Club.

President Herbert C. Parsons will be chairman of the meeting and lead in discussion of the subject, "Proposed Correctional Legislation."

Mrs. Ehrmann stated today that [illegible] votes [illegible] death penalty question have not been recorded [illegible] State House since 19[illegible]

See McGillicuddy Assured of Berth

Representative Daniel P. McGillicuddy of Francis street, Roxbury, today seemed assured of the $7500 post as head of the Boston traffic commission.

Another strong Tobin supporter who political observers declared was soon to be rewarded was Representative William F. Higgins of Roxbury, prominently mentioned for a job as member of the street commission.

BOSTON after DARK

By GEORGE HOLLAND

WASHINGTON IS ALIVE with the forecast and Boston is in close political touch with the Capital these days, so here goes . . . Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy will not linger overlong in the sedate purlieus of the Court of St. James . . . The story is that the East Boston native will be recalled to become Secretary of the Treasury . . . If this prediction pans out, then Kennedy will go down in history as one of the most honored Americans of all time . . . With the exception of William Jennings Bryan no modern has held so many important posts as Joseph P. Kennedy.

Massachusetts is destined to become more and more in the national eye through the abilities of its younger men, Melvin D. Hildreth, former president of the National Non-partisan League, said today before leaving for Washington . . . Hildreth is the son of a former Congressman from North Dakota and has been given several assignments by the White House . . . In 1944 the visitor from the West believes that Senator Henry Cabot Lodge and Mayor Maurice Tobin will have become so prominent in their respective political parties that there is a chance that each will be a presidential candidate . . . It's a long distance down the years but it's Hildreth's statement and he bases it on discussion he has heard in Washington.

Norma Shearer will play the lead in "The Women," if the releasing deal now pending between Harry Goetz, Max Gordon and Metro is closed, and it's dollars to doughnuts it will be. Norma likes both the play and the treatment Max Gordon has prepared, and now all that remains is for M-G-M and Harry Goetz to come to terms.

Both Paramount and M-G-M are negotiating for the privilege of releasing "The Women," in which Lois Wilson is now appearing on the local stage, and since Harry Goetz is a brother of Ben Goetz, L. B. Mayer's son-in-law, I reckon the M-G-M papers are as good as signed. What a break for the play and for Max Gordon to get Norma Shearer.

Boston Skating Club Attends Sonja's Premiere at Garden

By BETTY ALDEN

PERHAPS you have heard rumors . . . or read in the papers . . . that a charming and graceful young Norwegian skating star, whose initials are S. H. . . . arrived in town to give a series of performances at the Boston Garden . . . and promptly replaced the weather, the depression, fashions and every other topic as the subject of conversation . . .

GRACE MADDEN

So great is the spectacular attraction of this young lady . . . that she packed the Garden to the rafters on her premiere performance last evening . . . Socialites, movie lovers, skaters, business men and practically all those who could obtain a ticket were among the thousands . . . just as they have been in the other cities she has visited on her triumphal tour . . . but in Beantown the Queen of the Ice performs before a much more difficult and critical audience . . .

Not that the members of the Boston Skating Club, who occupied a whole special section last evening, did not acclaim her skill and grace . . . But being expert skaters themselves they did not view the performance merely as a colorful spectacle . . . But rather watched the technical, more intricate points with the careful eyes of expert journeyman tradesmen examining the artistry of the master of their craft . . . Even the acknowledged world's champion ... being a little self conscious before such a keenly discerning group . . .

Grace and Jimmie Madden, who have won both national and international skating fame were right in the middle of the Boston Skating Club section . . . surrounded by other Bostonians who have made their mark as amateur figure skaters . . .

Polly Badger, former junior champion of the U. S. is a petite appealing little figure like Sonja . . . and looked more attractive than ever last evening in a swagger coat and cap of chipmunk . . .

When Sonja's show opened in New York, Madison Square Garden was as gay as the opening of the Metropolitan Opera with practically all the socialites in the audience wearing their finest evening togs . . . But Bostonians still shrink from the idea of shivering in formal clothes as they sit above the frozen arena . . . even though it is seldom chilly enough for them to use the steamer rugs they carry along just in case . . .

Lucy Cochrane attended with Mrs. Samuel Eliot and Mary Eliot and others in the throng were Mr. and Mrs. George Muir 2d Anne Whipple Mrs. Nathaniel Simpkins, Jr., Mrs. Galbraithe Mitchell, Mrs. William Brace Pratt and Leslie Eustis . . .

Helen Fairchild to Wed on Feb. 26

BOSTON FRIENDS of Helen Louise Fairchild will be interested in plans for her marriage to Stanley Edward Young, Jr . . . The prospective bride is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Julian P. Fairchild of New York . . . and her maternal grandmother is the socially prominent Mrs. Ezra Fitch of Commonwealth avenue . . . Her mother was Helen Fitch of Boston a contemporary of many of the young matrons who play a prominent part in social activities on Beacon Hill today . . . Her mother died in 1927 and her father seven years later . . .

The young Fairchild nuptials are scheduled for February 26 at the home of the bride's stepmother, Mrs. Julian Fairchild on East Sixty-Second street . . .

The prospective bride's uncle, Rev. Dr. Frank E. Simmons will officiate at the ceremony and Miss Peggy Erskine of Cold Spring Harbor, L. I., will be the only attendant . . .

Mr. Young, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley E. Young of Ossining, N. Y., will be attended by his father as best man . . .

The future bridegroom was graduated from Pawling School and has a position in a bank in New York City . . . Miss Fairchild is a graduate of Miss Porter's School in Farmington, Ct. . . .

New Art Exhibit Opens at Museum

VARIOUS AND SUNDRY OPINIONS were expressed by socialite connoisseurs of art . . . at the opening of an exhibition of modern paintings yesterday afternoon at the Museum of Modern Art . . . The canvases, which cover a wide range of subjects, are the works of fifty living Americans and offer plenty of material for the never-ending controversy on modern versus classical art . . .

Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird, Jr., was one of the prominent socialites who studied the paintings with an appraising eye . . . and Mrs. Robert Treat Paine, whose Weston home contains many art treasures which make no concession to the modern influence, was very interested in the exhibit and enthusiastically pointed out its good features . . .

Mrs. Paine, who dropped in to view the paintings between an afternoon bridge party at the Chilton Club and a quiet dinner at home in Weston, wore her usual nosegay of white violets on a black caracul costume trimmed with sable . . .

Mrs. Nelson Aldrich was dressed in her ballerina coat trimmed with Persian and a small turban with gold lame woven around the crown . . . Mrs. Charles Hovey, Nathaniel Saltonstall and Mrs. David Sigourney, who wore a colorful costume of the new wood violet shade with a matching hat trimmed with a perky ostrich feather ornament, were others who strolled through the galleries . . .

Polly Binney was accompanied by Lydia Evans and Margaret Fitzhugh Browne, one of our leading portrait painters, discussed the paintings with the Misses Rosamond and Aimee Lamb . . . Debutantes Ellen Moseley and Jean Halladay divided their time between the gallery and the cocktail lounge, where delicious tea and refreshments were served.

Miss Jean Clark Feted at Party

Instead of the usual ... and orchid corsage, Miss Jean Clark, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul F. Clark of Brookline, wore a colorful winter sports costume as she greeted her guests at the Wellesley Country Club where Mrs. Alexander McW. Wolfe of Wellesley Farms and Mrs. Paul Ingraham of Wellesley Hills gave a party in her honor yesterday afternoon.

The unusual attire was most appropriate, however, for the affair was a "skating luncheon" to which the debutante guests brought their skates and enjoyed a brisk work out on the club rink after the luncheon was over.

Patricia Phelan, who sails on a South American cruise the end of this week, was among the invited guests and others were, Mary Louise Higgins of Worcester, Virginia Prout, Mary Casey, Jean Evatt, Patricia Spencer, Louise Fry, Harriet Brooks, Elaine Dearborn, Deborah Sprague, Marjorie Speare, Phyllis Childs and Nancy Tucker.

Miss Clark made her Boston debut at a large dance at The Country Club on December first and later made her bow to Baltimore society at the famous Bachelors' Cotillion. She studied at Miss Porter's School in Farmington, Conn., and graduated from the Beaver Country Day School last June.

Yes-Man's Portrait: Profile of Sonja's Punctilio Mr. Quist

AMONG THE SPORT CHARACTERS who make journalism quite painless for persons engaged in the business of setting down one little word after another is a lean, amiable and tawny-haired Finn who serves as trouble shooter, door-greeter and deputy manager to Miss Sonja Henie. This would be Hugo Quist, the punctilio-like, royal yes-man who helps his rink princess keep court and makes her life as free from pestilence as possible. Mr. Quist goes ahead to turn up the heat or falls behind to soothe the many moochers who wish to put the bite on the little lady's bankroll. Mr. Quist is equally adept with the press and the petty larcenists.

AUSTEN LAKE

This is the man who is credited with having sold Sonja to pictures two years ago at a time when she was tired of toying with amateur trash money and yearned to plunge up to her pretty arm-pits in real, robust funds. So Mr. Quist took her to Hollywood, hired a rectangle of skating ice and peddled her as the most delectable morsel of femininity extant and a pure boxoffice treasure. It was his crowning achievement in a career of promotional adventure.

Lest this get Mr. Quist in Dutch with his luscious boss let me add that he does not say he said Sonja. In fact he strains each little word with his teeth and is as monosyllabic a gent as can be met in a lifetime except at such times when Mr. Quist wishes to spill a few words about some topic near to his heart such as days when he acted as male chaperone to Paavo Nurmi, Willie Ritola, Red Grange and Mr. C. C. Pyle's bunion derby, to mention a few of his old antics.

* * *

The Man Who Wouldn't Unwind

"THERE IS ONE THING I DO SO much wish," said Mr. Quist in his slight Scandinavian tinge as we dallied over coffee this morning. "I do wish my friends, in writing of my present connections, would say no more about my former association with the transcontinental bunion derby."

He had never engaged, he said, in any enterprise which had caused the blush of shame to mantle his cheek. "But" he said "mention of the bunion derby reminds me of those county sheriffs who kept meeting us at the crossroads with writs and attachments." It gave him a headache to think about it even though ten years had flitted by.

"There were those wretched matters of shortage of funds at the end of each day's racing," he said, "and all the angry disputing and unreasonable demands of creditors."

That was the race, recalled Mr. Quist, in which a Negro youth named Sammy Robinson contracted a case of psycho-hysteria at the end of the contest and found that, though he detested running, his legs insisted on keeping up their daily twitches to the point of mania and he continued to run 2? miles a day for some weeks after the race had ceased. It baffled medical science, said Mr. Quist, until he took the boy to a specialist who hit on a happy cure which consisted of a running diet. "He called it psychosis," said Mr. Quist, telling how the Negro unwound himself by lopping a mile off his regimen each day until he slowed down to a walk four weeks later. "He has never run a step since," said Mr. Quist, dipping his kaffee-kuchen and nibbling of its moist dribbles.

He Nursed Nurmi's U. S. Tour

THEN THERE WAS THE ALMOST EQUALLY psychopathic case of Paavo Nurmi, who was a kind of male Greta Garbo in his public relations and loved to sneer at whole arenas of people who paid to see him run. And Mr. Quist recalled the occasion when he tooled Nurmi up to Boston and unloaded at the Back Bay Station where a vast swarm of Finnish-Americans had gathered to welcome their illustrious countryman with horn music and carpets of flowers. Only Nurmi spun past the reception committee with the curtest of growls before they could utter a single gutteral gulp of welcome. "It was very embarrassing," said Mr. Quist, recalling the roars of Finnish rage which followed Nurmi up Trinity Place.

Yes, Nurmi had banked a payload of U. S. dollars, enough to launch him later in a Helsingfors auto agency and gasoline-pump company. He did not know how much, said Mr. Quist. But there was the day that he visited the late Tex Rickard at the Madison Square Garden to promote a track meet featuring Nurmi, and Tex had spurned the notion, though offering his plant to Quist at an $1800 rental. "The race drew $20,000," said Mr. Quist, adding tactfully that he did not know what became of it.

After that there was a period of boosting ginger ales and then potato chips and later pretzels. And subsequently an interval with Professor C. C. Pyle's "astounding and astonishing aggregation of educational oddities" at the Chicago Century of Progress. Professor Pyle was a modern educator who displayed the ossified man, the blue-skinned and platter-lipped people, and the two-headed chicken among a varied list of other exhibits.

* * *

Calm After Cataclysm

ONE SOURCE OF VEXATION, SAID Mr. Quist, was the two-headed chicken's nervous habit of scratching its spare head loose from its moorings just as the professor was urging the people to step up and give this puzzling prank of Mother Nature their undivided attention. The two-headed chicken could not accustom itself to the extra head and, "there were moments when we nearly perished from mortification," said Mr. Quist.

So, he said, his life had not been exempt from turmoil and irritation up to this moment. But his old agitations made him value the gentility of his present job of door greeting, tub-thumping and trouble shooting for Miss Henie. "It brings one into touch with a better class of people," said Mr. Quist, "thinking of the bunion runner who couldn't stop running, the petulent Nurmi, the petrified man and the two-headed chicken. He glanced at his watch. "It is noon," said the punctilio-like, royal yeoman, "and the dawning of Sonja's new day."

Austen Lake writes regularly for the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Ice Artistry of the Finest Type

Sonja Henie, golden girl of fancy and figure skating and of the movies, is shown giving one of her brilliant numbers at the Garden. The vivacious Norwegian girl, as attractive and as brilliant as at any time in her skating career, was given frequent encores. Sonja radiated personality and charm during her entire performance.

Fire Scare Spices Sonja's Revue As 15,000 Greet Ballerina at Garden

Queen to Become U. S. Citizen

Sonja Henie, as graceful and as brilliant as at any time during her spectacular career as a fancy figure skater, was displayed in amazing acts before another crowd of 15,000 persons at the Garden tonight.

Sonja was given a splendid reception in the first of her five Boston shows. Other than for 500 seats in the upper gallery the entire Garden was filled.

The story of a "sellout" caused the gallery fans to believe they would be unable to get seats and as a result there were 500 empty seats in the second gallery as Sonja performed.

During the Sonja debut there was a fire scare when some of the decorations used in the fire music from the Valkyries number caught fire.

NO DISORDER

This is one of the spectacular numbers in the show. Sixteen men, each carrying two torches, came roaring down a chute.

As they passed out on to the ice, it was discovered that some of the decorations on the scaffolding had caught fire.

Those persons near the fire moved back to the aisle.

Bob Murphy, Garden superintendent, was immediately on the job with attendants who used fire extinguishers to put out the blaze.

The torch bearers kept skating while the fire was being put out and there was not the least disorder among the spectators.

One of the high lights of the show was the announcement over the public address system that Sonja was to become an American citizen.

This announcement was made just before Sonja came out on the ice for the "Song of Allegiance" number. She wore a red, white and blue costume in this number.

The news that the dainty Norwegian girl is to become an American citizen was greeted by applause.

HOLLYWOOD BACKGROUND

Sonja as "The Dancing Doll" captivated the large gathering. She was supported by her ballet members, all of whom represented the dolls of various nations. There were eight countries represented in this unique act.

While beautiful girls in the ballet skated as dolls, the men members of the chorus represented soldiers.

It was a Sonja show from the second the garden got mate her entrance on the ice seated in a sleigh until the Toyland will be closed.

The supporting cast was typical Hollywood, but in every number in which she appeared it was Sonja who won the applause and approbation of the crowd.

Larry Jackson, a comedian, received a fine reception from the big gathering in the Garden. This clever skater received almost as many encores as did Sonja.

Ted Harper worked with Jackson in the Challenge number. Mlle Margot also appeared in this number. While Ted Harper and Mlle Margot gave a brilliant exhibition of fancy and figure skating, Jackson put the crowd in a genial mood by his comics on the ice.

LOYAL TO QUIST

Sonja showed in a varied program. She did the Susi-Q with the entire ensemble in her opening number.

Later she skated to Norwegian Folk Melodies, the Russian Polvetsian dance from the opera Prince Igor, Tales from the Vienna Woods, Song of Allegiance, and then in Toyland.

Comedian Jackson Well Received

Sonja took occasion to state that Hugo Quist, who has handled her skating engagements since she was an amateur, will continue to act in this capacity.

"Many people have tried to manage me since I gained a bit of success," said Sonja, "but Hugo Quist will continue as my manager. Hugo was always loyal to me in the old days, and I shall be loyal to him now."

Sonja says that while in Boston for her present engagement she will continue her practice of sleeping 12 hours each day.

"There will not be any social life for me while I am in Boston," said Sonja. "I shall conserve all of my energies for my appearance at the Garden.

"I shall try to get 12 hours of sleep each day, and shall spend the rest of my time, other than when I am at the Garden, resting."

The Sonja show, other than for the rush seats in the second balcony, is a complete sellout. It is understood Sonja and her manager, Hugo Quist, have agreed to a special Monday night performance.

N. H. L. Wants Ross To Take Over Hawks | Club Should Be Big Money Maker

By BILL GRIMES

THEY TELL US that where there's smoke there's fire, and for some weeks there have been volumes of smoke exuding from meetings of hockey promoters, who, with all possible secrecy, have been gathering for conferences in various N. H. L. cities.

BILL GRIMES

James R. Norris and Arthur M. Wirtz, executive vice president and secretary-treasurer, respectively, of the Detroit Olympia and the Chicago Stadium, were in conference with Weston Adams and Art Ross in the Bruins office for two or three hours Tuesday afternoon.

Recently, a story "broke" that Ross was going to dispose of his Bruin stock and purchase a controlling interest in the Chicago Black Hawks.

Ross promptly denied he had any intentions of quitting Boston and insisted he hadn't even talked business with Major McLaughlin.

Hockey is one of the big money makers of sport today. And it's still in its infancy. It has grown with leaps and bounds since C. F. Adams purchased an N. H. L. franchise and financed the Bruins, who were the first American club in the league.

• • •

Adams' Money Put League on Feet

TWENTY YEARS AGO the N. H. A. was a three-club circuit composed of Ottawa, Canadiens and Toronto. It was all set to fold up and sink without a trace until Frank Calder was prevailed upon to become president. For five years Calder worked night and day to put the league on its feet. Finally C. F. Adams appeared.

Until he entered the N. H. L. Adams had restricted his interest in hockey to the amateur branch of the game. He was a fan but his Yankee intuition visualized a bright future for the "fastest game on earth."

Hockey was badly in need of finances when Adams began to operate the Bruins. After two seasons, despite the fact that his Bruins had not shown to advantage Adams agreed to underwrite the purchase of the Western Canadian Hockey League from the Patricks Frank, Lester and Guy.

The players from that organization were divided among the Bruins, Rangers, Detroit and Chicago. These four clubs along with New York Americans and Pittsburgh Yellow Jackets, which had entered the league the previous season, gave the United States six clubs against four in Canada. And the league was divided into two groups of five clubs each.

Ottawa and Pittsburgh were unable to support major league teams and dropped out of the N. H. L., as did Philadelphia, to which city the Yellow Jackets were transferred and St. Louis, where the Ottawa Senators were assigned to play during the 1934-35 season.

For the past three years, the N. H. L. has operated as an eight club circuit, with only two Canadian cities, Toronto and Montreal. Unless an immediate and drastic change for the better takes place in the Quebec metropolis, there will soon be only two Canadian teams in the league.

Boston and New York are the outstanding American cities from a money making viewpoint. Detroit thrived for three or four years but has slipped off this season due to the poor work of the Red Wings. Toronto is winding up its most prosperous season, one which will establish new attendance and financial marks.

During the twelve years Chicago Black Hawks have been in the N. H. L., Major Frederic McLaughlin has passed up an opportunity to develop that city into the greatest of all hockey centers, which achievement would have made millions for him and his associates.

Despite the reverses Hawk teams have met with and the antagonism of the press and fans because of the nickel nursing policies, the Chicago club has paid dividends annually. But nothing even close to what it should have.

It just so happens that it's the owners of the Chicago Stadium who are taking it on the chin because the Black Hawks are not up there fighting for the Stanley Cup. And it just so happens that James Norris owns the Chicago Stadium.

So you can see for yourself that there may be some fire behind the smoke created during the conference among young Jim Norris, Art Wirtz, Weston Adams and Art Ross.

In the event he is prevailed upon to make the Chicago Black Hawks a hockey club of which the Windy City will be justly proud, Ross will be affiliated with the financial power of the National Hockey League, James Norris.

Ross made hockey a thriving business here, with the assistance of the backing he received from C. F. Adams, who, while the game was in the process of development never hesitated, to dig down and purchase players regardless of cost.

If he should transfer his alliances to Chicago and the Norrises Ross will be in a position to create "farms," establish working agreements with minor league clubs and will have the wherewithal to go out in the open market to buy the best available talent for the Black Hawks.

'Kraut' Line Honored in Toronto

THE BRUINS are taking a complete rest. Art Ross has ordered them to lay off skating until tomorrow when they hold a practice session in Maple Leaf Gardens, Toronto. Bobby Bauer, Milt Schmidt, Woody Dumart, Dit Clapper and Art Jackson, who went home immediately after the Red Wings game, did not take their skates with them, as they did on their previous vacation two weeks ago . . . Judging from the reservations received by Frank Selke for Saturday night's Bruins-Maple Leaf game in Toronto, Kitchener and Waterloo will be deserted towns over the week-end. All of the hockey minded citizens of those towns will be in Toronto to pay tribute to the "Kraut" line, which is rapidly becoming the talk of the N. H. L. . . . Charlie Sands is playing hockey with such reckless abandon this season that he has come in for more than his share of injuries. To Charlie a few odd stitches are nothing more serious than getting a hair cut . . . Don't count Bill Cowley out of the race for individual scoring honors. He is in an ideal position for the race down the home stretch . . . Gordie Drillon, Cecil Dillon and Syl Apps are beginning to fill the strain of pacing the other contenders . . . Ray Getliffe is on the road to recovery. His infected jaw, which has been "locked" for three weeks, developed an abscess which broke on Sunday.

Ray will rejoin the Bruins in Toronto tomorrow but he may not be called upon to play until next week. Until a few days ago, Ray had not partaken of any solid food for weeks . . . Within a few days, Ebbie Goodfellow of the Red Wings and Earl Seibert of the Chicago Hawks may exchange uniforms . . . Connie Smythe has been hot for Goodfellow for a couple of years but has refused to listen to trade offers. He wanted to make the transaction on a straight money basis . . . James Norris is looking for hockey players not money . . . The high scoring which has been so prevalent this season indicates the trend is toward less concentrated defensive work than in the past. The defensive men are rushing more frequently and playing a great deal of the time at their blue lines and even in the center zone . . .

Toronto Maple Leaf club's dentist is trying to save the two teeth that "Flash" Hollett accidently attempted to remove from Syl Apps' mouth. Because he was disposed to play clean hockey regardless of the actions of his opponents, Apps acquired a reputation that he couldn't take it. Nothing could be more remote from the truth . . . George Owen always played the game but he could take it with the best of them. And the same is true of Apps . . . The Apps and Owen type are bad medicine when sufficently riled.

Owen gained the respect of all N. H. L. players after he had flattened a few, and Apps will do the same now that he's aware that the boys are laying it on because they think he'll go out of his way to avoid punishment. Apps is one of the highest types in professional hockey . . . He is a clean player and a clean liver, whose vilest profanity is "by Jiminy," "by Gum" and "by Christmas" . . .

J. J. Vaughn, the new Maple Leaf Gardens director, represented T. Eaton Company, owners of the land upon which the Toronto rinks was erected, when Connie Smythe and E. W. Bickle were dickering for the purchase of the Church and Carleton street lot . . . Wilfie Cude, Les Canadiens, is the only goal minder in the N. H. L. who insists his outer defense men back in on him during an attack. And that is especially true when the Canucks play Rangers, for Cude is convinced the Broadway Blues will beat any club that plays it defense wide of the cage . . . The Ford Company has become so interested in amateur hockey that it plans to sponsor its own team in Detroit and will sever connections with the Holzbaugh company. Players are given year round jobs which pay from $35 to $50 per week. Americans have the call over all other applicants . . .

Kanaly Invites 3 Xavier Stars To B.A.A. Meet

Southern Trio Have Startled Experts With Record

By MURRAY KRAMER

Today's track story opens with a questionnaire!

How many of you have ever heard of Xavier University in New Orleans?

Who are the following: Lloyd Thompson, Enos Hicks and Gilder Farrell?

If you can answer either or both, you're really a track authority.

The chances are, though, that the school and these three athletes mean very little to Boston's sportsdom. Yet, they must have something for Thomas Kanaly is putting his much desired "O. K." on these gentlemen from "N'Oline" and they will compete here as guests of the B. A. A. a week from Saturday night.

METCALFE'S O. K.

Now, normally cautious, Thomas would pay very little attention to three virtual unknowns from way down South because their presence entails a whole lot of shipping money.

Thomas is willing to let "cabbage" out of the till for names and for the veteran B. A. A. director to graciously accept these three virtually unknowns entails a bit of explaining.

Here is the Kanaly view on the matter.

"I'm not getting soft but I do have considerable respect for the opinion of several persons who keep me pretty well informed.

"Among my informants is Ralph Metcalfe, former national sprint champion and a member of the 1932 Olympic team. Ralph is coaching at Xavier and he wrote telling me about the boys.

"He also said that he knew the type of opposition they would face in the B. A. A. games and that I would make no mistake in accepting their entries.

"And, I know Ralph well enough to believe him and that's the story on my taking the trio."

Further investigation brings considerable information about these boys to the surface.

EQUALLED RECORD

Lloyd Thompson is a high jumper and last spring he cleared six feet seven inches in a big meet in Memphis. He is National Junior A. A. U. champion and his only defeat came in the A. A. U. senior championships. Metcalf thinks that Thompson is ready to beat the world's best.

Enos Hicks is supposedly another Eddie Tolan off the mark, and this tiny flier will force such stars as Marty Glickman, Sam Stoller and other national sprinters to be at their best if anyone of them hopes to come home out front.

The third member is Gilder Farrow who hails from Long Branch, New Jersey, but is a full fledged student at St. Xavier. Gilder is a hurdler and has topped the cross bars in 14.7 for 120 yard high hurdles and has equalled the record over the 80 yard distance.

Valleyfield Six Meets Olympics

The Valleyfield Braves who will be at the Arena Sunday afternoon to do battle with the Boston Olympics, are one of the biggest teams that the locals have been called upon to face this winter.

From Goalie John Lascelles down to Walter Lilly they are all big husky lads differing from the usual type of French-Canadian.

The defensive pair, Henry Matte and Gerry Philbin, 186 and 188 pounds, are the same type of defenders as the local Stubbs and Smith. Matte, who played with the Francais Volants de Paris last year, recently turned down a contract from the Les Canadiens. Gerry Philbin, Matte's running mate at the points, also played across the water last year with the Southampton Vikings of England.

Go Home Hitting Hot Pace at Hialeah

Go Home, five-year-old son of Grandace racing for DeWitt Page's Maemere farm, is developing into a real handicap performer. After finishing in the money in only seven of his 15 starts in cheaper company last year, Go Home has chalked up two victories and wound up either second or third three other times in five races at Hialeah Park. His second victory came yesterday when he breezed home four lengths clear of Mrs. Emil Denemark's two-time winner, Orientalist, in a mile race with Hal Price Headley's Fraidy Cat a neck back in third place.

Wheeling Downs, which held its inaugural meeting last fall, will open a 22-day meeting May 30, according to word received by Walter H. Donovan, president of the West Virginia Jockey Club and former secretary of the Florida Racing Commission. There will be no Monday racing at the Wheeling, W. Va., track.

Mr. Khayyam, winner of the 1934 Metropolitan handicap at Belmont Park, in which Equipoise was disqualified and unbeaten Chase Me was destroyed, died recently at Mrs. James M. Austin's Long Island estate. He was eight years old.

If all the chief eligibles start in the $5000 San Vicente handicap at Santa Anita Saturday, the seven furlong race should furnish a good line on the $50,000 Santa Anita Derby which will be renewed Feb. 22. Eligible for the San Vicente are, Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Tiger, one of the top notch juveniles last year, Myron Selznick's Can't Wait, conqueror of Fighting Fox in the Junior Champion at Aqueduct last fall, Maxwell Howard's Stagehand, trained by Earl Sande, and A. C. Compton's Sun Egret, winner of last Saturday's San Pasqual handicap.

Jim Ten Eyck Ill, In Oxygen Tent

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 3 (AP)—Jim Ten Eyck, 86-year-old Syracuse crew coach, was in a serious condition in a hospital here today after suffering a heart attack.

The veteran coach has been in an oxygen tent since collapsing ten days ago.

Dr. J. Raymond Graves said Ten Eyck's condition was better this morning and that some improvement had been shown for the last 48 hours.

Dizzy Dean Shows Edge on All Teams

Montreal Fans Are Giving Cold Shoulder To Hockey While Packing Them in For Wrestling Matches

NEW YORK, Feb. 3 (AP)—Ho, hum . . . European promoters are shouting that Ernie Weiss, newly-imported Vienna bantam, is the classiest continental clouter since Jimmy Wilde . . . Where've we heard that before?

Greasy Neale is getting his winter tan knocking golf balls around at Lake Worth, Fla. . . . Before tackling the alumni meetings Down East . . . Allen Tolmich, Wayne U.'s hurdler-sprinter, is eyeing a coaching job in Detroit . . . which would mean bye-bye 1940 Olympics for Mr. Tolmich . . . Looks like Old Home Week for Columbus on the Cardinals new roster . . . The gas house gang 's trying out four pitchers, three infielders and "Socko" Slaughter from the American Association this spring . . .

Seems like the state boxing commission can't see art for art's sake . . . putting thumbs down on those pictures of Tony Galento wrapping himself around a schooner of suds . . . Oklahoma's kid basketball team has averaged better than 50 points per start this season . . . Oakmont Country Club is getting its face lifted for this year's national amateur . . . because the pros broke their backs (and their clubs) there in the '35 open . . . Rip Sewell, Pirates' new flinger, is assistant police chief down at Plant City, Fla. . . . Watch out for this guy, Pie Traynor . . . Nap Lajoie is spending most of his time shooting golf just south of Palm Beach . . . when he's not deep sea fishing . . .

FROWN OF DEFENSE

Lots of basketball coaches tearing their hair about the zone defense this year . . . getting as bad as the row over five-man football defense . . . Notre Dame's George Parker may decide not to defend the national indoor tennis title this year . . .

Bill Brandt's new National League green book tells you Dizzy Dean has the percentage edge over every club in the National League, Carl Hubbell is in the red only against Brooklyn, and Van Mungo is on the short end against the Boston Bees and Giants in their big league careers.

'S funny, but Montreal fans are giving hockey (their No. 1 sport) the cold shoulder . . . and packing 'em in for those wrestling acts . . . The football coaches' hair-pulling society had a moaning session today . . . when word got around that Bill De Correvont was heading for Northwestern . . . When their respective heavyweights, Red Burman and Bob Tow, showed up at the Hippodrome last night, Jack Dempsey and Jim Braddock were not the seconds (as advertised) . . .

Max Bishop

Signs to Coach Nine At Naval Academy

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 3 (AP)—Appointment of Max Bishop, former second baseman of the Philadelphia Athletics, as baseball coach at the Naval Academy was announced today by Commander Andrew C. McFall, graduate manager of athletics.

Bishop succeeds M. G. (Marty) Karow, who resigned recently to become baseball coach at Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College. Bishop will take charge immediately.

Walter French, his former teammate is baseball coach at West Point, main rival of the midshipmen. The teams will meet here during the Navy June week exercises.

Brouillard Gets Match With Fox

NEW YORK, Feb. 3 (INS)—Lou Brouillard, of Worcester, Mass., former world welterweight and middleweight champion, has been matched with Tiger Jack Fox, Spokane light heavyweight, for a battle here on Feb. 18, Matchmaker Al Weill of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club announced today.

The winner tentatively has been offered a shot at Light Heavy Champion John Henry Lewis. Fox already has filed a challenge with the New York Athletic commission for the latter fight.

Gehrig Ready 'To Hold Saddle'

NEW YORK, Feb. 3 (INS)—The Yanks today received a nice letter—but no contract—from Lou Gehrig, noted cowboy motion picture actor, and first baseman of the world champions.

"Lou," said Ed Barrow, Yankee business manager, "wrote me that he is leaving Hollywood Feb. 4 and will talk terms upon his arrival. No, he didn't sign his contract but we don't anticipate any trouble with Lou."

Giants Rookies Sign

NEW YORK, Feb. 3—Two young pitchers from Richmond of the Piedmont League, Bill Benne and Bill Yarewick, have sent in their signed 1938 contracts to the New York Giants.

Russ Allen Lost To Harvard Six For Season

Russ Allen, captain and guard of the Harvard varsity football team and veteran defenseman on the varsity hockey team, has been forced to give up athletic competition for the remainder of the year due to aggravation of an old injury that gave him trouble during the football season.

The loss of Allen, a dependable if not spectacular, defenseman, will not require any drastic shakeup in the Crimson forces, however, for Coach Joe Stubbs has been preparing for just such an emergency.

Captain Traf Hicks and Gene Emerson will lead their mates on defense against the strong St. Nick's sextet Saturday night at the Arena. Alex Kevorkian, giant tackle, and Win Jameson, husky end, will provide reserve strength.

St. Nick's already holds one decision over Harvard as a result of a 6-2 triumph in Brooklyn during the Christmas recess and seem likely to repeat over this week-end.

The visitors' team is composed of former college greats, headed by Harvard's own Freddy Moseley who has been playing a bang-up game for the amateurs at center ice.

Moseley centers the first line which has Bob McLarnon, ex McGill star, at right wing, and Ronnie Morton, former Dartmouth player at the other flank.

Blake Shepard of Yale and Charlie Kirkland of Colgate make up the starting defense combine with Pete Grace, formerly of the Elis, in the nets.

The team remains undefeated in New York Amateur Hockey League competition so far this winter and has a 4-2 win over Yale and two wins over Princeton, although the Tigers took the season's opener, 7-1.

Coach Stubbs of Harvard will start his regular first line of Patrick, Cutter, and Mechem against the former collegiate stars.

The high-scoring second line of George Roberts, Ralph Pope and Austie Harding will spell the first-stringers. Vin Freedley will stand guard in the goal.

Hayes, Lanson To Meet Again

Entered in Monday's Bouts at Arena

The last open amateur boxing show, previous to the staging of the International Tournament, will be sponsored by the Irish-American A. A. at the Boston Arena next Monday night.

The lists in all classes are filling well, especially those for the novices.

There will be eight classes of competition—six in the open weights at 112, 135, 147, 160, 175 and heavyweights, and two for novices, 135 and 160 pounds.

Among the entries already received for Monday night are Romeo Paris of Fitchburg, 135 pounds open; James Halligan, Leominster; Mal Smallwood, Roxbury, and Larry Nagle, Roxbury, 147 pounds; John Hayes of Boston, New England A. A. A. U., 1937, light heavy titleholder, and Johnny Hanson of Worcester, heavyweight.

These two boys met in the final bout of the night last Monday at the Arena and put up the greatest exhibition for three rounds that has been witnessed in a Boston ring for many months.

In the novice 135-pound division there are John Montanaro of Haverhill, Anthony Cook of Haverhill, Herman Burque of Leominster and Sam O'Bryan of Roxbury, while in the 160 novice group are Dick Quinn of Leominster and Chet Wunschel of Fisherville.

Experts Divided On Outcome of Pin Match

Warren Brown Likes Chiminello—Play Starts Saturday

What do the local bowling fans think of the Chiminello-Plante match for the professional championship, which opens Saturday night at the Queen City alleys, Manchester, N. H.?

In a tour of the alleys the bowling experts were interviewed and expressed their opinions of the probable winner as follows:

WARREN BROWN, SHANLEY'S—

"Bet on 'em when they're hot has been my policy. Chiminello is boiling hot right now. That string of 170 fully proves this fact. Don't forget he made that string in the stiffest of competition against the very tops of the professionals which won for him the championship. I'm talking from 40 years experience in the bowling sport."

BILL SANDS, COMMONWEALTH ALLEYS—

"It has me guessing. I really feel like tossing a penny to pick the winner. There are arguments aplenty around here regarding the outcome of the match, and followers of the contestants are about evenly divided as to the outcome."

GUS BRAUNER, SOUTH STATION ALLEYS—

"Plante will win if some way can be found to have Chiminello keep his family away from the match. Their rooting is enough to rattle any bowler engaged in the usual excitement of a closely contested match."

JOE GRANT, EAGLE ALLEYS, previous to leaving for Florida said:

"I favor Plante. I believe him the most consistent bowler of the two. That splash ball of Chiminello's can raise havoc with the pins when it's working. It doesn't always work, though, and that is the reason I'm picking Plante."

JACK FITZGERALD, PRESIDENT OF THE OLD TIMERS—

"I've bowled against both, and often, too. In a series of matches Plante would undoubtedly win the most of them, but in a single match the breaks have a lot to do with the result. With the breaks even, I'm picking Plante to carry away the title and cash from Chiminello."

JOE RUBBICO, LEADING ALLEY PROMOTER—

"Both are friends of mine and the very tops in bowling skill, but with Chiminello's ball going right how can he be beaten? Chiminello has more followers, by a big margin, than has Plante among my alley patrons."

LEO BONZAGNI, NORTH STATION ALLEYS—

"Tell the truth, I can't pick between them. In a single match the breaks can decide the winner. My patrons are mostly for Chiminello. Being a local man, that is logical."

DICK ROUSE, SCHOOL STREET ALLEYS—

"I'm interested in this match only in that it has aroused the bowlers to talking, and that is a big boost to the sport in general. Chiminello has proved himself a true sportsman as well as champion as attested by his willingness to meet all comers. Plante has never dodged meeting the best, making him numerous friends."

FRED TENNEY—

"I've been in contact with both Chiminello and Plante in the Bowlaways and, from what I've seen, Plante should win. He is a very consistent bowler, capable of putting in string after string right close to the 120 mark, and that will win."

JOE SACCO, WATERTOWN BOWLADROME—

"It's a hot bed of Chiminello followers out this way, and I'm dragging along with the rest. How his fast ball can mow 'em down!"

At Mike Ganzi's alleys, where the return ten strings per man will be decided on February 14, it is all in favor of Chiminello, as is the case in Quincy, his home town.

On the other hand, New Hampshire, particularly in Manchester where Plante resides, is equally as strong in support of its local son. The latest odds on the match are 6 to 5 on Champion Chiminello.

Bob Gregory Will Be Ideal Referee | Englishman Knows Wrestling Game

By JACK CONWAY

Mr. Boston

PRINCESS BABA, beautiful daughter of the white Rajah of Sarawak, graciously offered no objections when Bob Gregory, her wrestler-husband, decided to referee the world's heavyweight championship wrestling bout between the sensational Louis Thesz of St. Louis and Steve Casey of Ireland at the Garden on next Friday night.

The Princess' parents, the white Rajah and Ranee of the little South Sea Empire of Sarawak, have strenuously opposed Gregory engaging in wrestling bouts. They have contended it was undignified for the husband of a Princess to grapple on a resin covered canvas.

Gregory, young, handsome, a university graduate and with the poise of the drawing room, decided the Rajah and Ranee did not have any right to object to his refereeing a mat bout.

Gregory's services were then sought as referee for the Thesz-Casey title bout. Paul Bowser felt the dashing Englishman would be an ideal selection in view of the fact he knows the wrestling game, and nobody could advance the claim he would favor either Thesz or Casey.

Gregory made his own decision on the matter of signing as referee.

The Princess and her husband hurried back from New York to attend the formal signing ceremonies.

The Princess had conferred with moving picture producers in New York in regard to Hollywood contracts. The Princess will take screen tests in either New York or Boston.

While in Boston, the Princess will continue her studies of our educational system. She is anxious to establish a sounder educational system in Sarawak.

Bob Gregory has agreed to donate the money he receives for his services as referee to charity.

"What could be a better charity than your educational fund for the children of Sarawak?" asked Bob of his Princess.

The Princess is planning for an educational endowment fund in Sarawak and her wrestler-husband has started [illegible] in a substantial way.

It is expected that the Rajah will donate a liberal part of his $1[illegible] a year income for this educational fund.

The Princess will remain in Boston until after the Thesz-Casey bout. The charming bride from Sarawak will [illegible] a royal box at the Garden show, and will present the winner with the three world's championships belts that will be at stake.

The presentation will take place in the center of the ring. It will be the first time a member of royalty has consented to make the presentation of a championship belt at a title wrestling bout.

• • •

Title Bout Arouses Wide Interest

THE BATTLE between Thesz and Casey has aroused as much interest as any mat bout ever held in this city. It's on an equal basis with the famous Lewis-Sonnenberg bouts and the O'Mahony-Londos and O'Mahony-George [illegible] bouts. It will attract many fans from all parts of the East and from as far West as St. Louis. There will be a special train from St. Louis which will carry a delegation of Thesz rooters.

Thesz is a St. Louis boy. He was born of Hungarian parents. Louis' father was a wrestler, and he started to school Louis in the mat game when the latter was eight years old.

During the years he attended school in St. Louis Thesz devoted as much time as possible to wrestling. This is why he attained such remarkable ability at the sport.

Gus Sonnenberg, Everett Marshall and Dan O'Mahony all went down to defeat before Thesz.

Thesz is the fastest big man to ever bob into the wrestling game. He moves around with the speed of a middleweight while he has the crushing power of a heavyweight.

Thesz is six feet one and a half inches tall, 22 years old, while he weighs 223 pounds.

The young Hungarian has been compared to Frank Gotch. He resembles Gotch in appearance, while he has the same terrific fire that enabled Gotch to become the greatest champion in the history of wrestling.

Random Shots At Target

TOMMY PARLE, in charge of tickets at Paul Bowser's downtown office at No. 115 Chauncy street, says there is a rush for pasteboards for the Thesz-Casey bout . . . One sports event after another has been selling out . . . Hockey, the Ice Follies, the K. of C. track meet, Sonja . . . Angel bouts . . . Paul Bowser used good judgment in offering the Thesz-Casey title bout at popular prices of 55 cents to $3.3[illegible] . . . In the boom days, championship wrestling bouts called for a top price of either $5.50 or $7.70 . . . The presence of Princess Baba in a royal box at the Garden on the night of the Thesz-Casey bout will attract thousands of persons to the Garden . . . The Princess has youth and exceptional beauty.

I think the wise Hugo Quist, manager of Sonja Henie, is displaying his usual fine judgment in deciding to keep the dainty Norwegian girl tied up with the sports pages as much as possible . . . Hugo believes Sonja's tremendous success is due to the excellent publicity she has always received on the sports pages of the various newspapers in this country and in Europe . . . Sonja has been sold to the public as a perfect athletic type, a fine, wholesome, unassuming girl . . . She has lived up to the best things that have been written and said about her . . . I believe Sonja's success has inspired thousands of youngsters to better things in life.

Revere Admirers To Honor Steele

Friends and relatives of Robert Steele, former manager and coach of the Chelsea Millstreams' baseball and football teams, will honor him at a testimonial dinner, sponsored by the Fenno Social and Athletic Club, to be held at the American Legion building, Revere, Thursday evening, February 10.

Steele, who was said by many to be one of the best judges of sandlot ballplayers in the country, has recently left the hospital, following a long siege of illness.

Turner, Vosmik Prove At Home on Rostrum

Writers' Dinner Goes Over in Grandiose Fashion

By BILL GRIMES

With the ball room of the Parker House jammed almost beyond capacity, the Boston Chapter of the Baseball Writers' Association of America paid tribute to Jim Turner, the Bees hurler, who was selected as the most valuable player on either Boston club and Joe Vosmik, new Red Sox outfielder.

Chairman Joe Cashman, of the Boston Chapter, presented Jim Turner with the Nick Flatley plaque, for establishing the lowest earned run average in the National League during his freshman year in the big show, 2.38.

After apologizing for his Southern drawl, Turner set the gathering back on its heels as easily as he turned back National League hitters last season. He spoke very smoothly and effectively, proving his talents are not confined to baseball.

Vosmik was introduced by Billy [illegible], boss of the Red Sox farm system, and went over [illegible]. He and Jim both made very favorable impression with everyone present and won hundreds of new well wishers.

The dinner was an unprecedented success. There had never been any question that the affair would go over the top but even the most optimistic didn't dream that close to 500 would trek to the Parker House.

• • •

[illegible]

• • •

Young Walter A. Brown, general manager of the Garden and Arena, took time out before the Sonja Henie show to pay his respects to the Baseball Writers Association, Jim Turner and Joe Vosmik . . . Jack Burns, former Browns and Detroit Tigers, who is preparing to first base for the Toronto Maple Leafs, hunted high and low for Dan Howley, but the Bard of E. Weymouth failed to put in an appearance.

• • •

They should have [illegible] of the speeches. Some of them would have caused Mae West to blush.

• • •

Joe Cashman came within a word or two of calling for a pinch hitter when he started to lead Jim Turner about Nick Flatley. It was a touch spot for Joe . . . All of the boys missed Danny Creedon, who put on such a great show a year ago. Danny forgot to duck an automobile the other day and is now confined to the Veterans Hospital in Chelsea. But his old pal Benny Drahan, carried on nobly in his absence . . . Fred Mitchell was present but just as retiring as ever . . . "Nuf Sed" McGreevy, one of the original Royal Rooters, was introduced. He was following baseball before many of those in the hall were born.

• • •

Charlie Gilman stole the show. He did a job on Jim Turner and Casey Stengel, which was taken in the same spirit it was said. In fact Turner proved to be one of the best audiences Charlie ever played to . . . Dick Harlow, the Harvard coach, almost reached for the smelling salt when he was called upon to take a bow . . . Frank "Off The Record" Ryan, was an interested spectator . . . Bart Sullivan and Gene Flynn, Holy Cross came down from Worcester . . . Freddie Maguire, one of the smoothest infielders the game ever produced, was tucked away up against the wall. As was Cy Perkins, who sculled up from Gloucester, with the aid of a fair wind . . . Billy Weir and Elbie Fletcher spent most of the evening "ribbing" Jack Onslow, but they couldn't get him down . . . It was very apparent that the fans have not forgotten Duffy Lewis. "Old King Casino" was tendered a real ovation when he was introduced, and he gave them the old hand shake, which must have started out around "Frisco" . . . Tommy Padden and George Tebbetts, Manchester and Nashua, N. H., respectively, two big league localites, who slipped away from Boston clubs, fanned with Jack Burns and Cy Perkins.

• • •

Park Commissioner William P. Long, his able assistant, Bill Mullins, and ex-Fire Commissioner Eddie McLaughlin, who is arranging to go South with the Red Sox and plans to spend some time with the Bees at Bradenton, enjoyed the show . . . Joe Vosmik made a fine impression. The latest acquisition to the Red Sox has a fine face . . . Phil Troy, Tommy Daly and Ted Olsen of the Red Sox took bows . . . Tony Caseaux, East Weymouth, who seldom passes up any sports gathering, was on hand . . . Fred Hoey was disappointed that there was no fish course on the menu . . . Dr. Bill Rose, the well known dentist, who has been making Southern trips for a quarter of a century, favored with a song . . . Jim Geary enjoyed every minute of the party . . . As did Johnny Igoe, another rabid baseball fan . . . [illegible]

H'It's A Bloomin' Deal, Paul

Defies Royal Ukase To Referee Title Go

BOB GREGORY — PRINCESS BABA — PAUL BOWSER

Gregory Third Man In Ring at Thesz-Casey Match

Bob Gregory, English light-heavyweight champion wrestler and husband of beautiful Princess Baba of Sarawak, will referee the world's heavyweight wrestling championship match between Louis Thesz of St. Louis, the titleholder, and Steve (Crusher) Casey of Ireland, the challenger, at the Garden on Friday night, February 11.

Gregory accepted the job after a lengthy conference with Promoter Paul Bowser at his suite in the Copley Plaza hotel and it was his own decision.

"The Princess never has objected to my wrestling activities," Gregory declared. "The objection has come from the Rajah and the Ranee, her parents.

"I have my own life to live and I'm going to live it as I see fit, and not as somebody else sees fit. I have always done what I chose to do and I am going to continue doing it."

The Princess Baba, watching the signing of the contract, apparently was pleased with her husband's decision.

Before Gregory agreed to referee [illegible] the princess is in America to study our educational system and has been visiting schools in Greater Boston. They returned from New York.

BOB EXPERT REFEREE

Gregory is an expert [illegible] referee in addition to being light-heavyweight wrestling champion of England.

"I have refereed more than 100 professional matches in Europe," Gregory said. "In fact, during the last year I was kept nearly as busy refereeing big matches as I was wrestling."

[illegible]

"I'm glad I have the referee question settled," Promoter Bowser said. "Now I can give my entire time to lining up the rest of my program. This will be the greatest wrestling show I have staged in my entire career."

JOHN PAUL JONES

Bowser worried [illegible] has made the headway [illegible] up his supporting program. He has signed contracts [illegible] and two preliminaries, and the rest will be topnotch [illegible]

[illegible]

The semi-final will see [illegible] and [illegible] 3½-round [illegible]

Bowser [illegible] In one [illegible] world's champion will take on [illegible] of Texas and in the other [illegible] Steve [illegible] a dandy matman.

Bartolo, Garcia Meet in Prelim To Title Bout

Ambitious local feather-pushers will have the [illegible] at the Good [illegible] boxing show next Wednesday night at the [illegible] Garden when Harry [illegible] of Chelsea [illegible] featherweight and lightweight championship against Merry Mike Kaplan, Dorchester, in a 10-round feature.

In the eight-round semifinal, Roy [illegible], Brockton, gets a second shot at slugging Lou Foster of New York, who beat Kelly recently in a wild bout that saw the latter hit the deck six times in the last two rounds and [illegible] a verdict he had practically clinched.

Matchmaker Rip Valenti has now completed three six-round bouts: Salvatore Bartolo, East Boston, vs. Sammy Garcia, Quincy; Abe Denner, West End, vs. George Harper, New York, and Joe Glasgow, Quincy, vs. Jimmy O'Rourke, Boston, thus giving six of the eight spots on the card to local talent which needs a crack at the fistic limelight.

Boxing Results

NEW YORK—Bob Tow, 206, Washington, D. C., and Red Burman, 185, Baltimore, drew, 8 rounds.

Waltham-Walpole Hockey Game Features Lawson Cup Playoffs

Framingham Takes On Wellesley

[illegible] the Waltham-Walpole [illegible] one of the best matches of the schoolboy season.

In [illegible] scheduled game a few weeks back Waltham, undefeated at the time, edged [illegible] a 1-0 victory to keep its slate clean.

The game was won in the last few minutes of play on the grand efforts of Art Shaughnessy, whose first line with Len Richardson and Don Harvey led the Waltham outfit to the league championship.

Walpole will depend on its ace forward line of Will Harrison, Joe Walsh and Bill Fisher to offset its opponent's high scoring line.

Harrison is considered by many as the outstanding player in the league but he will have to look to his laurels against the Waltham captain and league leading scorer Shaughnessy.

Facing off in the second big game which will decide the other finalist in the trophy running, second place Framingham takes on [illegible] Wellesley.

Framingham has a well balanced [illegible] the [illegible] forth in the [illegible] second place team is [illegible] the [illegible] team that handed Waltham its first setback of the season last week.

Samara Topples Tor Johnson

The score was 2 to 0 this morning [illegible] the famous wrestling feud between the Charlie Gordon-Paul Bowser forces.

First it was Rudy Bartsch whom Samara, Gordon ace, turned back and this week it was the gargantuan Tor Johnson, who only a year ago was at the champ [illegible] running in the Bowser [illegible] The scene was the Boston Arena.

The Algerian threw the big Swede with a flying horse and [illegible] low-up head scissors in 18.33.

It was a rough match.

Now Gordon says he will chase Louis Thesz, Robert and Casey for matches for his Algerian.

Winging into the Thursday night waftings again, the air is laden down with a guest artists galaxy for loudspeaker patrons to hear.

Vallee the variety builder extraordinary of broadcasting dom, seems to have the ether edge, judging from advance advices, with Fay Bainter and Walter Abel adorning his spotlight (WNAC) between 8 and 9 o'clock this evening.

Gertrude Niessen, too, is on the top of the heap once more for a special song setting with Rudy not for getting of course the [illegible] taking character of Betty Lou as voiced in the little girl manner by its host and handsome Tommy Riggs. FLEETING FLASHES

Irene Castle McLaughlin, internationally famous as a dancer, a lover of dogs and criterion of fashions, will appear as guest on the Jamboree program tonight (WBZ) at 10:30 p. m.

Highlighting the program will be a dramatization of the outstanding events in the life of Mrs. McLaughlin. The sketch will depict the early days of her career when she was making ballroom dancing famous, of her campaign to guard dogs from undue cruelty and of her successful campaign to set the fashion of bobbed hair for women.

A broken ankle kept Miriam Hopkins from achieving an ambition to dance on Broadway when she was a girl in her teens.

Nervous indigestion last week kept her from achieving another ambition—to play on the "Kate Smith Hour." However, fully recovered, the talented young actress will accomplish this latest desire this evening (WEEI) at 8:00 p. m.

BOSSY AS BENEFACTOR

The cow, not the dog, is man's greatest friend and benefactor claims Cayburn Pence, a student at the Ashboro Junior College of Ashboro, North Carolina.

It's a cow that's putting him through college, as he will explain on Gabriel Heatter's "We, the People" half hour (WEEI) tonight at 7:30 p. m. What dog, he asks, has ever financed a college education?

It all came about through a unique agreement with the college bursar whereby Cayburn would receive his tuition free as long as Daisy, his pet cow, supplied enough milk for the college dining hall.

Wayne Morris and Spring Byington of the movies and the [illegible] team of Ethel Bartlett and Rex Robertson are Bing Crosby's guests on the Music Hall [illegible] this evening. With Bob Burns and Johnny Scott Trotter's orchestra they will be heard (WNAC) far and wide at 10 p. m.

Wayne Morris is the athletic young man who made his first hit as the boxer in "Kid Galahad." Currently he's one of the chief people in "Submarine D-1." It's his first appearance in the Hall.

SONG OF SONGS

What an exhaustive survey over a period of many years reveals as the world's most beloved melody of all time will be played by Meredith Willson and his orchestra on the "Good News of 1938" program tonight.

The composition, the title of which will not be announced in advance of the broadcast, will be heard (WNAC) between 9 and 10 o'clock.

Willson and his orchestra already have played these [illegible] the ten most beloved [illegible] Johan Strauss' [illegible] Danube Waltz, Largo, [illegible] Dvorak's "New World Symphony", Dvorak's Humoresque, Pilgrims Chorus" from "Tannhauser", Londonderry Air," Handel's "Hallelujah Chorus," Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony, Paderewski's "Minuet in G," and Rossini's "William Tell Overture."

Billie Burke is scheduled to head the guest list doing a [illegible] review of "Everybody Sing." [illegible] will be in there as usual [illegible] as master of ceremonies.

'Pink Eye' Kills Score of Deer

DENVER, Feb. 2 (AP)—A wild life tragedy which has killed scores of deer within a week sped relief expeditions to Colorado ranges today to combat an epidemic eye disease.

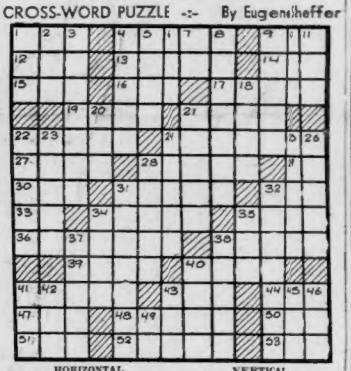

John Hart, chief state game warden, said the disease commonly called "pink eye," blinds the victims. Helpless and unable to find food or water, the deer die of starvation or are killed by beasts of prey. Some have walked blindly to death over precipices.

Railroad Problems Foremost

Position and Outlook of Nation's Carriers Is Troublesome

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Judging by the amount of attention currently directed toward the railroad situation by both political and business leaders, their problems come first in a new drive for recovery. Besides rate hearings, there is the conference which the President has said he will hold.

The ICC decision is expected within the next few weeks in brokerage circles and will, of course, have a decided bearing on reviving the purchasing power of the railroads as well as being the deciding factor in the financial future of borderline companies. Should an adverse report be handed down by the commission there is little doubt in our mind that many carriers now struggling, none too successfully, to keep out of bankruptcy will throw up the sponge. And it stands to reason that the much needed buying of new equipment and materials by stronger units will not take place in volume. Heavy industry and revival prospects might well be said to hinge on the fate of the rate plea.

• • •

LITTLE FELLOWS SPEAK

The conference of small business men in Washington found the little fellows speaking their minds in a decidedly vigorous manner. And the political world must have discovered with something akin to shock that they are literally brothers under the skin with big business. What hurts one apparently hurts the other. The tax problem long ballyhooed as directed at accumulation of huge surpluses also forces the small fellow to pay out all earnings. And he doesn't like it a bit. The "let's reform" crowd that appears to believe everything that happened in the United States in the last 150 years was wrong may be slowed up. At least the uproar should have a salutary effect on the legislators that are asked to swallow their panaceas.

NEW ISSUE SOLD

One of the most constructive developments the new issue market has witnessed in many months occurred in connection with the Appalachian bond sale yesterday. Off to a discouraging and somewhat slow start early in the day interest suddenly perked up and the underwriting syndicate closed its books in mid-afternoon. Before the close of the day the 4 per cent bonds were quoted at a premium and the debentures were in good demand. Reports from the financial district indicate dealers were impressed with the orders from institutions and individuals as well. One large insurance company is said to have taken a large block of bonds after appearing somewhat disinterested early in the day.

• • •

The Appalachian experience definitely proves there is a market for new issues and all that is needed is a supply of good offerings. This, of course, is not going to be in evidence until business men, big and little, have some confidence in the outlook. Say what they will, political belittlers will have a hard time now in proving otherwise. And it is up to them to see that needed confidence is restored.

• • •

All current market studies must wind up with one conclusion and it is that the general market does not show a definite trend at this moment. As matters are no upward patterns of importance have developed as yet. If the industrial lows of November 23, December 29 and January 28 are so considered there are the rails to be cited for the other side. The difference can only mean indecision and until such inconsistencies are eliminated naming the next definite move is guesswork. When the averages are in gear it will be time enough to become definite.

• • •

The selling wave which appeared today is a discouraging development, but even in regard to it there can be no certainty until the industrial group slides under its low of January 28. Then it will surely look as though a test of its bear market low will take place. Those who cannot or do not want to take the risks involved by waiting for the latter might well lighten up when, as and if the January 28 low is broken.

Seat Sale Lowest In Twenty Years

NEW YORK, Feb. 3 (INS)—The price of memberships on the New York Stock Exchange today fell to the lowest level in 20 years. Arrangements were made for sale of a seat at $59,000, a decline of $6000 from the last previous transaction, and the first time since 1918 that a membership sold at this price.

Eastern Mass.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3 (AP)—The Interstate Commerce Commission authorized the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company of Boston, and the Northland Greyhound Lines, Incorporated, of Chicago, today to qualify as self-insurers under the motor carrier act of 1935.

Dec. 'Ad' Index Tops November

NEW YORK, Feb. 3 (AP)—Printers' Ink General Advertising Index showed a gain of 4.7 per cent in December over November, when corrected for seasonal variations, but registered a decline of 3.6 per cent from December, 1936.

Newspapers and magazines, accounting for around 67 per cent of the total, showed a decline in December from the corresponding month of 1936, but the other three component parts of the index—farm papers, radio, outdoor advertising—were ahead of the 1936 month.

Preliminary report for 1937 showed a 5.5 per cent increase for the general index over 1936.

Sears, Roebuck Sales Off

CHICAGO, Feb. 3 (AP)—Sears Roebuck and Co., mail order house, announced today that sales for the fiscal year ended Jan. 29 increased 8.9 per cent over the previous fiscal year, despite a drop in the 13th period of 3.1 per cent.

Sales for the fiscal year totaled $572,874,101, compared with $526,292,136 during the year ended Jan. 29, 1937, a gain of $46,581,965.

During the 13th period, from Jan. 2 through Jan. 29, sales were $29,634,776, a decline of $942,067 from the $30,576,843 sales during the comparable period in 1937.

Newsprint Rate Rise Is Argued

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3 (AP)—The American Newspaper Publishers' Association told the Interstate Commerce Commission today, that a 15 per cent increase in railroad freight rates on newsprint would cost the railroads $410,342 a year instead of increasing their revenues.

The association said in a brief, filed while the commission was studying the rate question, that a 15 per cent increase would divert newsprint shipments to other forms of transportation.

Atlas Powder Co. Votes 50 Cents

NEW YORK, Feb. 3 (AP)—Directors of Atlas Powder Co. today declared a dividend of 50 cents a share on the common stock, payable March 10 to stock of record Feb. 28.

In 1937 the company distributed 75 cents March 10, June 10 and Dec. 10; $1, Sept. 10, and a special dividend of 50 cents Dec. 24.

Telephone Break Upsets Market

Leaders Drop 1 to 5 Points At Worst

NEW YORK, Feb. 3 (AP)—So-called "high grade" stocks broke sharply in today's market and pulled props from under the rest of the list.

Losses of 1 to 5 or more points were plentiful at the worst, but extreme set-backs were reduced subsequently in many instances. Dealings were much livelier than yesterday, although there were numerous slow periods. The ticker tape loitered near the fourth hour.

Further weakness of American Telephone unsettled sentiment in the early proceedings. This issue was about 12 minutes late in opening because of wide gaps between bids and offers. Its initial appearance was on a block of 1500 shares, off 2¾ at a new low since 1935. It eventually was down more than 7 before receiving some support.

TELEPHONE BONDS UP

Listed American Telephone bonds, contrarily, were up a shade. Other bonds were uneven, along with major commodities.

Prominent share sufferers included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Westinghouse, Allied Chemical, du Pont, Eastman Kodak, Union Carbide, Johns-Manville, Douglas Aircraft, J. I. Case, Homestake, Dome, Union Pacific, Anaconda, Kennecott, U. S. Rubber and Allis Chalmers.

Rails and utilities were a bit more resistant than other groups.

There was little news to account for the downfall of "Telephone." Even sources close to the company were seemingly mystified at the relapse. Wall Street observers, though, said there was some estate and trust fund selling of the stock, fears a forthcoming federal communications commission report may not be so pleasing for the corporation, possibility of more rate cuts, talks of a lowered dividend and recent financial statements of subsidiaries revealing a sag in earnings. At the same time the New York subsidiary reported a modest January gain in stations.

The "little business" meeting at Washington provided meager stimulation marketwise, but hopes were expressed in boardrooms something would come out of the conference that would deflect the recession trend.

Far from cheering was the warning of President Homer Martin of the CIO Automobile Workers' Union that the nation's industrial centers were facing a "catastrophic depression" and that labor would battle to the last ditch against wage slashing.

Building shares were behind notwithstanding optimism over the government's housing campaign.

CURRENT ITEMS

Early estimates of last week's freight loadings indicated the total was down contra-seasonally. Shipments for January were placed at 17.1 per cent under the 1937 month against a year-to-year drop of 18.2 per cent in December.

While stocks of goods held by corporations continued to dwindle, study was given a trade survey disclosing balance sheets of 32 widespread concerns at the end of their last fiscal years showed inventories were some 12 per cent ahead of the previous periods.

At the beginning of foreign currency transactions sterling was up ⅛ of a cent at $5.01. The French franc was unchanged at 3.27¾ cents.

Short Selling Phases Discussed

NEW YORK, Feb. 3 (INS)—Technical phases of the new SEC rules on short selling were discussed Wednesday in a conference between Otto Abraham, of Abraham & Co., vice-chairman of the committee on foreign business of the New York Stock Exchange and Henry L. Deeming, of L. F. Rothschild & Co., and Ganson Purcell, director of the SEC trading and exchange division.

Factual Study Increasing in Business

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
International News Service Financial Writer

NEW YORK, Feb. 3 (INS)—This period of rapid economic change and challenge is stimulating increasing factual study of behavior in the business world.

For example, when politicians five years ago determined to give farmers a large share of the national income, they were inclined to accept as a truism the assumption that short crops mean high prices and hence increased farm income. In pursuit of this belief, little pigs were killed, and hundreds of thousands of acres of cotton wheat and corn were plowed under.

CHECKUP COMPLETED

An independent checkup has been completed of the behavior of farm income from wheat and cotton over representative years, including years of big, medium and small years. The 45-year period studied includes the 18 years from 1879-96 when the trend of wholesale prices was definitely downward. During this period, cotton prices moved downward with the general trend, yet there was a 25 per cent expansion in the acreage of cotton produced.

The study also includes the next eighteen years, 1897-1914, when the general price level was definitely upward. In the period of rising prices, there was similarly a further expansion of 25 per cent in cotton production in the United States. In addition, another nine-year period after the World War, 1921-29, was included. The years have been equally divided into years of high, medium, and low cotton production.

What does the record disclose?

The subjoined table summarizes the facts:

45-YEAR TOTALS	Acres harvested (1000 acres)	Production (1000 bales)	F'm value ($1000)
High	432,564	178,673	9,315,773
Medium	408,972	154,947	8,294,221
Low	375,211	126,914	8,110,452

The significant disclosure is that during the 15 years of small crops farmers had an aggregate income of $8,110,452,000, which was exceeded in amount during the years of both large and medium sized crops. Thus it is clear that the small crops brought the smaller aggregate income, even though prices per pound averaged 2.3 cents higher in the years of small crops than in the years of bumper crops. The table also shows that the income was slightly larger in the years of big crops than in the years of medium crops.

PERIOD OF STUDY

When the period studied is broken down to five nine-year periods, the results are confirmed, showing that the large crops produced more farm income than the small or the medium crops. Likewise, during the nine-year periods, the large crop years uniformly had more acres than the small crop years and likewise had higher yields of cotton per acre than the low crop years.

Moreover, during each of these periods the small crops invariably brought a higher price per pound. This particular study shows that the farm income during each of the nine-year periods was largest for the big crops with low prices and smallest for the small crops with the higher quotations.

An analogous wheat survey told the same story.

In each of the five nine-year periods, the years with largest production were also those with the largest acreage and also the highest yield per acre. Invariably, too, the years with small production yielded higher prices per bushel.

For the 45-year period, the 15 years with the highest production yielded an average of 80.3 cents per bushel, and the 15 years with the medium production yielded a price of 86.8 cents per bushel, and the 15 years with the smallest crops yielded an average price of 92.3 cents per bushel.

GENERAL RESULTS

In general, the results were precisely the same as in cotton. In each of the five nine-year periods, the large crop yielded a larger farm income than the smaller ones, even though the smaller crops sold on an average at 12 cents per bushel more. For the whole period, the large crops average $574,302,000 per year, the medium crops average $554,323,000 per year and the small crops average $523,376,000 per year.

Political assumptions concerning planning "scarcity" and "plenty" should be checked by such fact-finding efforts. Once economic problems are stated in terms of simple arithmetic, there is a smaller area for debate.

New View on Washington's Threatenings

By B. C. FORBES

A new view:

"I'm not sure whether I'm not glad rather than sorry over President Roosevelt's latest threatenings and anti-business action. I have especially in mind his proposed execution of the 'death sentence' on holding companies throughout the country and his point-blank refusal to stop utterly unjust governmental competition to destroy utility properties and thus ruin a great many innocent investors."

"Why should any one welcome such disruptive policies?" I asked.

"I am inclined to think that the wilder Mr. Roosevelt becomes in his determination to injure business, therefore to injure employment and revival of good times, the more he will loosen his grip on sensible citizens and on Congress. Certain it is that the wilder his proposals become, the greater opposition he will encounter.

"That's why, since I do not believe in the government treating legitimate business absolutely unfairly, I feel the farther Mr. Roosevelt strives to upset our whole industrial system, the sooner his hold upon the public and our federal lawmakers will be weakened."

Is there anything in that analysis?

COOPERATION URGED

Surely it would be better for us all if President Roosevelt sought sincerely to cooperate with business and industry and investors in expediting the restoration of confidence and recovery.

Yet, did you note the moment President Roosevelt chose to hurl his threat against holding companies, which embrace almost every leading employment-giving enterprise in America? It was at the very time he was calling into consultation leaders identified with such corporations and preceding his scheduled confab with the largest group of men of affairs the White House has summoned since the days of NRA.

This action on the part of the President manifestly did not provide a fruitful background for these conferences. Rather did it cause questioning of his sincerity in declaring his readiness to listen to reason and the sincerity of his promises to practice conciliation and co-operation.

My own view is that more and more of our enlightened citizens will demand helpful action on the part of Washington, and that the throwing of new bombshells into the business and employment arena will incite widespread resentment.

The lamentable truth is that hopes for genuinely constructive steps by the chief executive are fading among the employment classes.

Also, the changes in the composition of the Supreme Court diminish hopes that it will stay the President's arbitrariness.

Laborer Quizzes Haney on Wages

Noted Economist Scores Questioner on Class Hatred, Jealousy

By LEWIS HANEY

(Professor of Economics, New York University)

Special to Boston Evening American

NEW YORK, Feb. 3—What are we going to do when all high salaries are gone, and no savings are left? Fight?

In a recent article I pointed out what would happen if a co-operative group of laborers, running their own business, were to try to put their wages up and the price of their product down, during a depression. Now a laborer has written a frank and interesting comment. It deserves careful consideration by everybody in the country, for it leads to the live question I have asked above.

FIRST QUESTION

First, this laborer asks:

"If low wages will sell the product of the ten laborers working in their own shop, suppose they sleep in the shop and allow wages of only $1.25 a day. Would that end depression?"

If the price of food, clothes and shelter were low enough, it might. And if all laborers' wages and all salaries were reduced in proportion, prices might be low enough.

It isn't the number of dollars a day you get; it is the number of dollars you have to spend for a living, that counts. If prices are low, your hourly wage rate can be low and still buy you a good living.

Of course, all wages and prices would have to be so in line with one another that most people could agree that they were reasonable.

$3 FOR 8 HOURS

He next asks:

How about last summer when I worked as a bricklayer eight hours a day for $3. Didn't that help?"

Well, as a temporary matter wasn't it better than no work at all?

If all wages and salaries were to come down in proportion, $3 might look good. I can remember when it would have seemed big money to me and have given me plenty to live on.

"Up to 1929, I earned $16-$18, and then we all lived," says my correspondent.

In the slang of 1929, I may reply: "You said it, kid!" You sure lived high in 1929, and that is why we all have to live low in 1937. Everybody went into debt to enable them to pay the high wages and price of that spree year.

ANSWERS EASY

So far, the answers are easy. My questioner simply has not thought the thing through, or made allowance for the general application of the readjustment in wages and prices. (He is a better bricklayer than I am.)

But now comes the main point. He says:

"You guys with a good job make the people laugh. Don't you hate to take care of the bums?"

That is bad medicine, Mr. Clark—all that bitter sort of feeling and talk. It is the sort of stuff that has put bleeding Spain where she is today.

Such feelings of jealousy and hatred are the only thing that can keep America down and allow some dictator to rule.

Why not snap out of it, and all pull together, Mr. Clark? Why take my job away? Why not just make your job better?

After all, what would become of us if nobody were allowed to earn high pay? There would be less hard work by ambitious people trying to get ahead. Total production would be smaller. That would mean less employment and wages for all.

There would be far less taxes paid, and less money for the government to scatter around.

Finally, if enough people felt that way, the Radical and Communist sort would try to take all my savings. Then I would fight.

Millions might line up on each side, and we might proceed to kill each other off, all of us living on what we could grab.

UNPLEASANT PICTURE

That is not a pleasant picture. I, for one, hope that we can all be fair, keep our tempers, and lick the rabble-rousers and trouble-makers out.

The man who wrote that letter is a good fellow, I'll bet. I'd like to see him.

But I hope we never find ourselves squinting down two rifle barrels at each other.

New Haven to Spend $2,000,000

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 3 (INS)—In petitions filed in the United States district court, the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad today sought permission to spend nearly $2,000,000 to improve its roadbeds and renovate its equipment.

The railroad contemplates purchasing 7580 tons of rail and track materials at $587,000; remodelling into modern coaches 50 cars formerly used on the New York, Westchester and Boston Railway, at $700,000 and overhauling and modernizing 100 old steel coaches at $553,000.

Hearing on the petitions was set for February 13.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1938

They that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit, the things of the Spirit.—Romans VIII., 5.

The text for today is suggested by the Rev. Charles L. Page, Tremont Temple, Boston. The next text will be suggested by the Rev. Earl Lidden, Methodist minister, Providence.

The Editor Says:

"We cannot ignore legislation of this kind and disregard the flag of our country."—Dr. Patrick J. Foley, Boston School Committee member.

DR. FOLEY takes a sensible and patriotic stand against the bill filed on Beacon Hill by Representative Christian A. Herter of Boston to amend the Massachusetts Flag Salute Law.

The Herter proposal would excuse children from participating in allegiance to the Stars and Stripes if the children presented a written request from their parents.

It would allow them to sit with their arms folded while other boys and girls stood and pledged their faith in the country that protects them in peace and defends them in war.

One does not have to be a psychologist to realize the great damage such an exemption would do to the immature minds of elementry school pupils.

Nor does one have to be a student of international affairs to appreciate how enthusiastically the Fascists, the Nazis, the Communists and the Japanese Imperialists will applaud Mr. Herter's efforts.

PROUD OLD GLORY

—has in recent weeks suffered numerous insults, not the least of which was the act of Japanese soldiers who pulled it to the ground and burned it.

Yet—and most Americans will agree—NO INSULT COULD BE WORSE THAN THIS PROPOSAL.

For it will mean that while the Government in Washington is demanding that the Hitlerites, the Stalinites and the Japanese respect our flag when it is carried abroad, Massachusetts will be permitting young Americans to ignore both the flag and the ceremony which has honored it from the earliest days of the Republic.

Actually, the acceptance of the Herter Bill would amount almost to a vote of confidence in the outrages of the Japanese army.

Certainly we could never become very much disturbed when the Stars and Stripes were dragged in the dust of the Orient if, at home, we allowed our own children to treat the national emblem as though it were a scrap of paper or an old rag.

WOMEN ON THE JURY

"It is an affront to women, who have the constitutional right to be tried by a jury of their peers, to go before a jury composed only of men."—Senator Sybil H. Holmes of Brookline.

Senator Holmes' argument in defense of jury service for Massachusetts women speaks for itself. In fact, it speaks so forcefully that few will voice a contrary opinion.

Women have demonstrated their worth in every field of modern life. Miss Holmes' own career as attorney and legislator is convincing proof that the fair sex can and does handle jobs that were once considered men's exclusive property.

Clearly, therefore, few will question the ability of Miss Jones or Mrs. Smith to render an intelligent decision in a court of law.

Our opinion is that the chief opposition to jury service for women will come from women themselves rather than from men.

Aware of the strenuous efforts of numerous men to escape sitting in judgment on murder and other cases, we have a strong suspicion that their mothers, sisters and wives will find the duty equally distasteful.

WHY SNUB MR. BUCKLEY?

"Without inviting State Auditor Thomas H. Buckley, instigator of the investigation, to attend, Governor Hurley today called a conference of other State officials in his probe of mental hospitals."—Wednesday's Boston Evening American.

Conduct of this kind does not do credit to the Governor or to his administration. There should be no room for spite or childishness in the investigation of a State department which costs the taxpayers more than twelve million dollars annually.

Nor should it be forgotten that the situation Mr. Hurley is now looking into was brought to his attention by Auditor Buckley.

Without his presence, the probe resembles a court trial with the defense invited to do the talking and the prosecution told to stay out.

Of course, if the Hurley administration wishes to close its eyes to the deplorable conditions already revealed in institutions for the insane, the failure to invite Mr. Buckley is understandable.

But if the Governor's purpose is to learn all the evidence, the State Auditor ought to be there—in a front row seat.

THE CRIME ROUNDUP

"The full strength of the police department was thrown on 'street patrol duty' today in an emergency move to combat Boston's increase in crime."—Wednesday's Boston Evening American.

Police Commissioner Timilty deserves praise for his determination to drive criminals and their associates out of Boston. There can be no compromise with the underworld.

Because of the failure to apprehend the slayers of Louis Gaeta and "Beano" Breen, gangdom is undoubtedly enjoying a false sense of security. That seems a logical explanation for the current wave of holdups, burglaries, rackets and innumerable minor crimes.

Therefore, it is clearly time that the underworld was crushed—and effectively crushed. Eight hundred and fifty extra men—all in plain clothes—patrolling the streets ought to be able to do it.

While the Ship Delays

By Nelson Harding

Congress started in the special session to do something about injurious taxes.

Nothing really was done.

Congress in the regular session is merely tinkering with the bad taxes —taxes that deprive industry of the resources which it needs to expand and to hire men at good wages.

Congress should act quickly by repealing the depression-making taxes!

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.

JEROME Zerbe, a silken-voiced young man with a collar ad profile, has carved out a somewhat enviable metropolitan niche, snapping candid shots of the showy night club crowds. He is to "cafe society" what Cecil Beaton is to the international set.

His field of action is El Morocco, which has the after-midnight popularity of the old Texas Guinan rookery plus a bit of polish. There are waving white palms against a ceiling of Mediterranean blue twinkling with stars. Zerbe is responsible for the zebra decor of the wall seats.

He is capitalizing on the New York reaction to polite snubbing—even in pot-luck photography. He trains his camera on only the whooping spenders, the minked and silk-hatted hadjis of frivolity along with the inevitable sprinkle of magnificent heels. Hoi polloi thus is in a twitch to be snapped.

Zerbe came to town from Cleveland almost stone broke and majored in rough going until he caught on with his pictures. Today all is changed. He has his duplex in the latest swash, a valet and a barn-like living room filled with art and book treasurers. Done during a depression!

The recession has not yet cast adrift the personal stooges. Wherever Fannie Brice goes merrymaking she takes along the owl-faced Roger Davis just for the laughs he provides—at least for her. The notorious Peppino is shared between Phil Plant and John Perona. Until his passing Steve Reardon, an ex-cop, often accompanied George M. Cohan on his more frivolous moments.

But no one had so much fun with or made so much money out of stooges as the late Ted Healy. He often had a night out with his gang of rowdy harlequins, cuffing them about in the bars and night places just as he did on the stage. And enjoying it hugely.

Ted Healy had less of that quality dubbed "ham" than any performer I ever knew. He was—as his estate showed—not interested in the money side of acting nor in the fame that often accrues. He was a clown because it was fun and nothing else but a good time interested. He never used make-up and the clothes he wore on the stage were the same on the street. Yet he had his moments of arriere-pensee.

Now and then people would recognize him wandering through the galleries and much of his $1750 a week salary went to buying beautiful flowers for those he admired. But he didn't want to be twitted about these sentimentalities. He preferred to be thought a shade on the tough side.

The new type of comedy has nothing of the hearty abandon and jovial roughage that characterized Ted Healy, Ed Wynn, W. C. Fields and other laugh makers. It is more labored and studious—the Stroud Twins and Oliver Wakefield, for instance. The effort is to puncture some person or institution in the manner of a Peter Arno cartoon without having the Arno riposte. Much is imitative of the English school of comedy.

After all, there is still fun in the whack of the bladder and the zing of the slap-stick for those practitioners who know how to use them skillfully. Comedy doesn't need a full dress suit and a monocle.

Yet I wonder if I would roar today as I used to at Nat Wills with his ridiculous tramp outfit and blacked-out teeth. He had me on the edge of hysteria several times—especially when he would look about furtively, edge over slowly, talking swiftly all the while, and reach down for what seemed a lost coin.

Thingumbobs: James Gordon Bennett popularized the Pekinese, his favorite dog, in America... Bide Dudley was once an end man in a minstrel show... Strickland Gillilan, who makes a living telling funny stories, confines his reading almost solely to tragedies and poems of sorrow... Orson Welles, the 21-year-old wizard of the theater, is a protege of George Ade... Billy Gaxton, known as the stage's luckiest star, hasn't been able to find a suitable play for a year, but he has a profitable perfume business on the side.

There was a swell candidate prospect for the League of Parsley Haters at the Sert Room last night. He not only snatched the sprig away and buried it to the floor, but ground it under heel.

The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

Nobody can eat more than a fat woman on a reducing diet, when she weakens and gives herself a sort of "special dispensation."

Somehow, it always makes a woman feel a lot younger to discover that she is petite enough to buy her clothes in the Misses' Department.

It takes three strokes of luck to get a good husband these days. First, the luck to find him in a world full of egoists; second, the luck to choose him in a world full of skilled Lotharios; and third, the luck to make him choose YOU in a world full of glamour girls.

Next to good southern spoon bread, the softest thing on earth is the heart of a man who has just put his wife on the train for Reno—and is still feeling sorry for himself.

Many a man who starts out just for a little romantic adventure and a few kisses, is astonished to find himself either pushing a perambulator or paying alimony at the same old desk.

The modern girl may not be an ideal housewife, but, by the time she has learned how to manipulate a can-opener, a vacuum-cleaner, eight or ten electric gadgets, a patent cocktail shaker, a radio and a motor-car, she can certainly qualify as an expert mechanic.

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

MAYBE it is just as well that the Scotch shipbreakers should be limbering up their cutting torches and poising their chip-hammers to break the Leviathan. She pretty nearly broke everybody else that ever had anything to do with her.

This old Prima Carnera of the deep caused losses totaling somewhere around $60,000,000, as one outfit or another tried to support her in the style to which she had been accustomed.

She holds one record, however. One trip, she carried more passengers than any other ship since the day when Elmer G. Caveman made the first boat out of a log and took the family for a ride. As one of our war time troopships, she carried 13,548 officers and men on a voyage from New York to Queenstown.

When she was launched as the Vaterland, at Cuxhaven, in that far golden summer of 1914, the Imperial band played "Deutschland Uber Alles," the Mannerchors almost floated her on their own wave of song, vast multitudes cheered, gay banners snapped in the breeze on this ship in gala dress, orators boomed and reverberated, and the sun glinted on the dress swords and all the shining gear of imperial Germany.

From Bremerhaven the bands proudly piped her off on her first trip to New York. She performed beautifully in her first round trip, incidentally not returning a profit. On her third trip, with the sun shining and harbor craft tooting hospitably, she pulled into New York harbor late in July, 1914, a spot on the calendar which the world will not soon forget.

When the war news came, she was promptly interned and given an indeterminate sentence to Hoboken.

There she lay, gathering barnacles, until we entered the war in 1917. Workmen swarmed aboard, ripped out panels, carvings and gewgaws from the Kaiser's imperial suite, wrecked the gorgeous swimming pool and stripped her as bare as the inside of a big red barn.

She was packed to the gunwales with soldiers to fight the country which had built her. Even her proud name was scrapped, along with her crystal chandeliers and mural paintings.

From then on, the Leviathan was a bear which somebody always was holding by the tail, unable to turn her loose. The United States Shipping Board spent $9,000,000 putting her in shape again for the passenger trade, sent her on ten North Atlantic voyages and each time, when she tied up, jotted down some figures in red ink.

In July, 1923, the United States Lines, Inc., bought her for $6,782,000. She ate her head off, gobbling oil the way a hungry cat laps cream.

In 1931 Kermit Roosevelt's United States Lines Company, not to be confused with the above, took her over. They got tired of spotting up $80,000 to stake the stately old dame to a round trip to Queenstown, with nothing to show for it. They made a desperate effort to hand her back to the government, but the Department of Commerce said that they not only must keep her, but continue to run her. And so they did, taking their loss.

And now she brings $650,000 to make scrap iron which, unhappily, somebody may some day shoot at the Germans, or maybe at us; and so the Vaterland will come home.

Mr. Roosevelt, complying with the government's stern order that he must keep on taking his losses, remarked that these walloping big ships were just white elephants which weren't any good to anybody. His outfit is doing nicely with smaller ships, about half the tonnage of such ships as the Queen Mary and the Europa.

"These huge ships are all paid for, in the long run, by the taxpayer," he said. "They are built out of mere sentiment, and in the interest of national prestige. If Britain would hand me its biggest ship on a platter, on condition that I operate it, I wouldn't take it."

The Political Parade

By George Rothwell Brown

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.

WHEN the ill-fated Harding Administration scuttled American naval supremacy in Chesapeake Bay—while England and Japan were tearing up blueprints—it was creating the necessity for President Roosevelt's national defense program.

The Republican party made a fatal blunder back in 1921.

That blunder was the first of many. There is a reason why that party is represented in the Senate today by but 16 Senators, and by but 90 Representatives in the House.

As Republican sniping begins against the new national defense program, nothing could be clearer than that such a blunder, as would be Republican opposition to this critical juncture, would cost this party dearly.

Republican fault-finders don't realize that the American people have never opposed any Administration which sought to protect the nation in time of peril.

To ask Mr. Roosevelt to disclose all the facts in his possession on the international situation—as some Republicans already are doing—is to demand that the commander-in-chief of the Army and Navy reveal to the world facts which would be beneficial to our potential enemies.

Republican opponents of this defense program may not realize it, but the country pretty well understands that Mr. Roosevelt is confronted by the necessity of repairing the damage done by the Republican party at the Washington conference.

These critics need no confidential revelations from the President. All they have to do is to buy a newspaper, and read the headlines.

It isn't generally known, even by their colleagues, but there are a couple of men in the House of Representatives who could pinch you if they wanted to. And put you in the Hoosgow until you scared up a lawyer.

Charlie Plumley, of Vermont, and Harold Knutson, of Minnesota, are full-fledged deputy sheriffs. The only ones in Congress, although other members have been badge wearers in their time.

Congressman Joe Fernandez, of Louisiana, has been around telling how Plumley qualified.

Out in San Diego County, California, not so long ago, Plumley was telling Admiral Gannon that he feared he would die without realizing his ambition to be a brakeman on the Central Vermont Railroad, and twist the old hand brakes, and be a sheriff, with power to arrest somebody or serve a writ.

"That evening, at the Chamber of Commerce banquet in San Diego," says Fernandez, "they made Plumley stand up, and raise his arm. Wonderingly, Charlie did so. Then they quickly administered the oath to him, and presented him with a badge and the necessary credentials. Before he knew it he was a full-fledged deputy sheriff.

"'Now go home,' said the toastmaster, 'and get yourself made a brakeman. California has done all she can to help you realize your ambition.'

"As for Knutson," says Joe—"well, that's another story. But he never stops for any red lights driving back to Minnesota. Just shows his badge and says, 'Boys, I'm almost catching up with him!'"

March of Events

By Benjamin DeCasseres

WHEN Senator Arthur Vandenberg, of Michigan, pronounced the word "PROFIT-SHARING," he hit upon one of the sanest ideas in this much-muddled world.

The Senator has asked, through a resolution, for an inquiry by the Senate Finance Committee of that way out of our economic problems.

Profit-sharing in business makes every employe a member of the firm. It doubles his interest in his work.

It tends to kill laziness, incompetence and the "lay-down."

Profit-sharing in business will break the back of Communism, Socialism, Fascism and all the other alien-minded isms that are infecting America by the substitution of an AMERICAN-MADE SOCIAL ECONOMY of our own.

Profit-sharing does away with the system of bonuses.

It increases the self-respect of every worker. He is no longer an underling when he is a partner in the profits of the concern he works for.

Profit-sharing on a large scale in this country will solve most of our labor difficulties.

It would mean the fusing of labor and capital in a common pull-together movement.

PROFIT-SHARING should be America's contribution to OURSELVES

Steve Good, old Texas showman, had a bird and a wife. The bird was the size of a half-grown turkey. It had a big white feather that grew straight out of its head like a flagpole.

Steve and his wife and the strange bird trekked it all over the South in a trailer. The bird performed all kinds of odd tricks for a small price.

At Henderson, N. C., Steve's bird went on a sit-down strike. Steve, so it is alleged, began to beat the bird with a stick to make it do its stuff.

A 19-year-old youth, Clarence Fairbanks, stepped out of the audience and ordered Steve to stop striking the bird.

A fight followed. Steve was killed with an ax and his wife's skull was fractured—at the hands, so it is alleged by the North Carolina authorities, of Fairbanks.

This strange and useless bird "crows itself hoarse night and day in a police cell," the dispatch from Henderson reads, as much as to say, "HURRAH! I'M ALIVE!"

A story like that illustrates on what absurdly little things hangs the fate—quite often the life and death—of human beings. The movement of a pebble may start an avalanche of ills in our lives.
